Spacious Campus Spurs Broad Learning

Spread over eighty acres is the panorama of WHS. The school building itself encompasses an eight hundred thirty-five foot-long hallway. Well-equipped science and home economics laboratories, an observatory, and a brimming library offer challenges to interested students.

At the expertly preened football field, Cardinal fans congregate autumn nights to scream their team to victory. Biology classes make use of the Olentangy River and the Nature Trail because of the variety of plant and animal life there. The shelterhouse is the scene of canteens and club picnics, and the swimming pool affords great enjoyment to members of the Worthington community. Tennis courts, baseball diamonds, and scrimmage patches give aspiring professionals and clumsy beginners ground to improve their form in their respective sports.

Far-sighted planning on the part of school administrators have given Worthington youth an unusually beautiful, spacious, and well-equipped backdrop for growth.

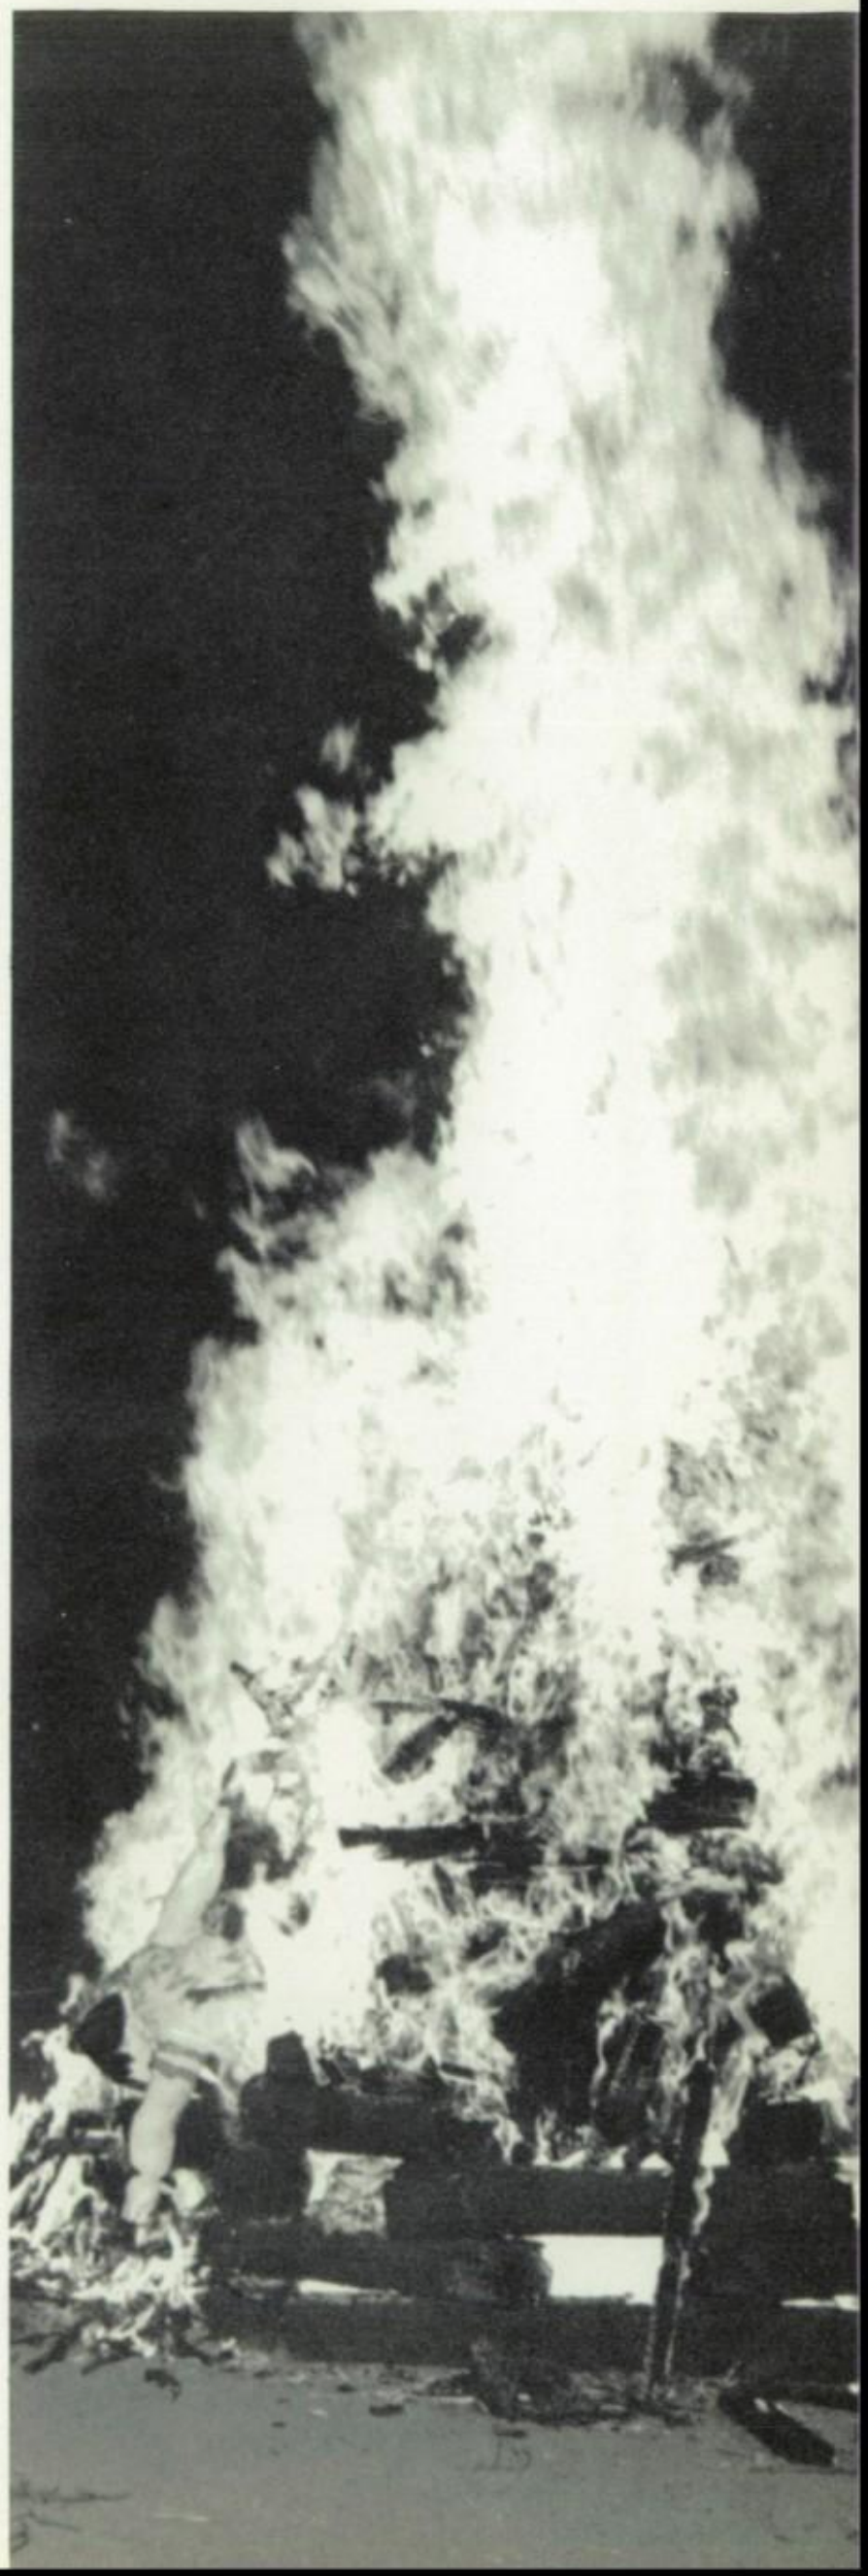
Variety Of Individuals Compose WHS

Even more important than the buildings and facilities of Worthington High School are the people who use them. Pressing through the halls, calling to friends, carrying notebooks, boiling hot dogs for lunch, quieting shrieking telephones, and sweeping up scrap paper are all the people who make the one-way staircases and marathon hall Worthington High School.

Classrooms harbor the teachers who suggest new ideas and the students who wonder what a grade means. These are all people with special problems, talents, and desires. Some of them bite their nails and others read comic books. But most of them like to laugh, and they like the feeling of climbing into a heated car after a frosty football game. Each of them is an important individual who wants to be happy and who needs to be understood.

The cooks, school nurse, librarian, maintenance men, special advisers, and the other people who work with and for the school also play a large part in the panorama of people who make Worthington an institution of social as well as academic learning.



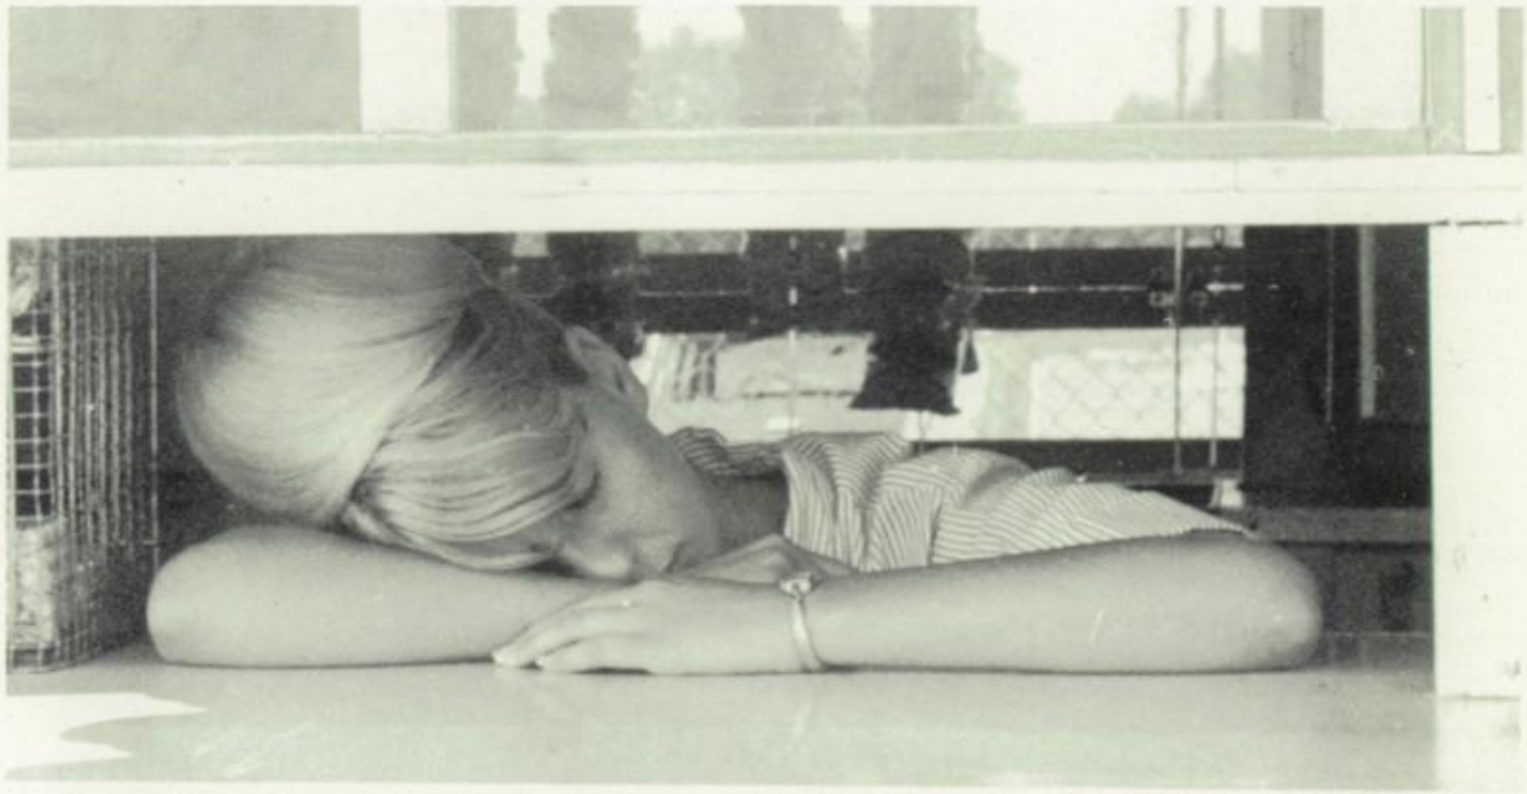
"Mod" Styles Fashion 1967

After gymnasium bleachers had collapsed into the walls for the summer, and the tires had screeched out of the student parking lot, the year 1967 expired. So the panorama of a year remarkably different from any other was also finished.

In that time Austrian Erich Kastner, AFS student, became a very special addition to the student body. Fashion took a zany turn as students modeled a variety of "mod" creations. Patterned stockings, round-toed shoes, and short flowered skirts were common togs for girls. Long-haired boys sported polka dot shirts, distinctively cut suits, and hip pants in bold styles.

Nineteen sixty-seven was freshman year for some four hundred seventy-five high school students. With the sponsoring of canteens and the shaping of a Homecoming float, freshmen became a very active and vital part of the school. Sophomores, caught in between, were plagued by health and biology classes.

Upperclassmen at last, juniors created and financed the Junior-Senior Prom and operated the football concession stands. With a delightful class play, the signing of pictures, college visits and exams, the Senior Class capped its high school career. Regardless of class rank, students will look back on the year 1967 as an important one in the formation of their lives.



Zest And Vigor Enliven School Routine

Locker doors slammed, loudspeakers crackled, and the people who were the high school followed the routines and fashioned the highlights which were the year 1967. Now their doings are captured in a panorama of activities bewildering in its energy and variety. Though people tend to remember only dramatic moments—the breaking of a swimming record, graduation march, an unexpected phone call, a ruinous foul in a tournament—it is the simple, everyday happenings which fill the bulk of a year.

Chains of memories and sensations spill out at the thought of confiscated paper wads, frenzied conversations between classes, track work-outs, and cut slips. In full view in the panorama are the contrasting moments of the joking over trays of pizza and the tense, impatient feeling before election results become known.

The views and colors which Worthington High School students have lived transform one ended year into a beautiful and living image, an image capturing the energy and creativity, the restlessness and discouragements of seventeen hundred young people.

Faculty

Moving with their students in and out of classrooms are those men and women designated teachers. It is not easy to grasp the welter of duties they assume with the signing of their contracts. Besides explaining, demonstrating, and repeating ideas in the classroom, teachers must advise clubs, coach and inspire teams, and counsel confused teenagers. No operetta or play would have quite the finesse it needs without the directorship of an experienced teacher. Careful monitoring of cafeterias and study halls and organizing and chaperoning of dances are but a few of the incidental activities of the faculty. To imagine being parent and friend to almost seventeen hundred restless adolescents is to begin to comprehend the charge of a Worthington High School teacher.

Officials Complete Smooth Change Of Jobs

Operating smoothly and efficiently, Worthington school administrators underwent a change of jobs this fall that resembled a momentous chain reaction. The resignation of Assistant Superintendent of Schools and Director of Instruction, Mr. Harold R. Armstrong, set in motion the major shift.

Voting October third after careful study, Worthington's Board of Education transferred Mr. Earl W. Lane from his job as high school principal to Mr. Armstrong's former work. Previous Assistant Principal, Mr. Louis E. Koloze, already known to students as manager of attendance, became principal of the high school, while American history students saw their teacher, Mr. Charles W. Merrilees, named assistant to the principal.

Linear algebra and the axiomatic method of mathematics are features of the new Math V course. This class studied complex concepts formerly taught only at the college level. By introducing this course, the math department made another counter to the fierce demand for specialists in highly technical fields of math and science.

Courses Amplify Science Department

Faced with the challenge of keeping up with trends in modern research, the science department expanded both its courses and facilities. Advanced chemistry, to be studied concurrently with physics, was opened to qualified upperclassmen. To handle the surge of chemistry students, Room 103 was transformed into a second chemistry lab. New devices such as balances and semi-micro equipment excited more thorough lab work. Streamlining further, the science department created a single course for freshmen from the former earth science and space science programs. Team teaching of this course gave students well-rounded instruction from several specialists.

New French textbooks and a German seminar gave evidence to the resolution of a fast-expanding language department to uncover fresh approaches toward the teaching of foreign languages.

Mrs. Hedwig Schmidt arrived from her native Germany to lead German II and III classes and conduct a senior seminar involving insights into the German heritage.

For the first time ever, Latin students began reading Latin the second day of school instead of learning declensions (nominative forms of nouns).

These new methods made it easier for students to master the language and to develop large, working vocabularies.

Graduates with first-hand knowledge of the business world owe their impressive grounding this year in part to new courses offered by the Commercial Department. Seniors trying to gain experience in offices took part in the all-new Co-operative Education course. Their schedules called for half a day of classes and several hours of stenographic, clerical, or bookkeeping work in area offices. Three other courses—Personal Law, Record Keeping, and Economics—opened to juniors and seniors. Shorthand students practiced their craft in an electronic dictation lab this year.

Student Life

Mingled with the mislaid glasses and discarded scrap paper of the school weeks were those special weekends which excited much anticipation. Among red-letter events on Worthington calendars were Sadie Hawkins Day, Homecoming coronation, Bells Are Ringing, "B. C.'s Christmas Party," The Male Animal, and graduation.

Faculty and students planned, painted, and paid for those projects. Perhaps as much satisfaction and pleasure stemmed from the preparation of each function as well as from the actual attendance. For those who rounded up costumes, painted floats, and hired bands, preparation meant not only fun, but also a sacrifice of time and energy. The exhilaration of Prom night or opening performance was enhanced by the sense of having done jobs well.

In a fight sparked by the extra thrill of Homecoming, Dave Cowgill tackles a Hartley Hawk as sophomore Steve Roberts (30) hovers ready to lend a hand.

With sparkle and poise, Queen Sally receives honors at a festive dance.

During the game, Queen Sally and her escort, Dave Scheer, become just two anxious spectators.

It's a bonfire this year! For the first time in several years, Cardinal fans congregate at a bonfire/pep rally before the game to charge their spirits and burn a Hartley Hawk in effigy.

Bob Marvin (left), better known on local television as Flippo, brings his quintet to provide music and jokes for couples at the Homecoming Dance.

Bonfire, Floats Accent Homecoming 1966

Decaying railroad ties form the foundation of the rousing bonfire in which an imitation Bishop Hartley football player meets death before the annual Homecoming game.

Homecoming festivities, sponsored this year by Student Council, began Friday evening with the lighting of an enormous bonfire. Activities at the pep rally included the introduction of the football team, the ruthless sacrificing of a mock Bishop Hartley football player, cheers and a skit by the Cheerleading Club, and a pep talk by Coach Welling.

Directly preceding the game, class Homecoming floats were judged. The seniors stole first place with their entry, "Homecoming is for the Birds," and the sophomores, using "Hang on, Snoopy" as a theme, were judged second best.

As Co-Captains Dan Simcox and Greg Nesser each bestowed the traditional kisses on Homecoming Queen, Sally Meyer, they became so overwhelmed with her charm that they forgot to take the football with them. Other members of the court, Ann Winter, senior; Sandi Foster, junior; Kelley MacRae, sophomore; and Stephanie Hill, freshman, looked on in amusement as the boys returned to retrieve the ball and start the game.

Saturday night at the Homecoming Dance, students and alumni gathered in the gym to see Student Body President Dick Donovan crown Queen Sally. Guests at the dance listened to the alternate sounds of Bob Marvin's Quintet and the B & W Commonwealth.

Senior imagination created the winning float, entitled "Homecoming is for the Birds." Dangling from the Cardinal's mouth is a Hartley Hawk.

Connie Tippett's entrance as Mrs. Chauvenet, the pompous society lady, provokes shrieks of laughter from the audience.

"Let me give you my card," offers Greg Marus, as Elwood, to Sally Shannon in her role as Mrs. Chumley.

Camped out on an auditorium seat is Miss Nedra Stimpfle, who projects creative suggestions to amateur actors, as part of her job as play director.

During rehearsal Leonard Rothenbuhler roosts on a battered ladder and forms ideas for his job as technical director.

Thespians Create Invisible Rabbit Called Harvey

White-frocked Myrtle Mae, played by Janet Pine, startles Vera (Susie Littlepage). The maid (Cathy McKown) gapes as Judge Gaffney (Mike Lee) assists horrified Vera to a chair.

Chosen for the Thespian fall production was the popular comedy, Harvey, a play which centers around the actions of Elwood P. Dowd and his best friend, Harvey, a six-foot-one-and-a-half inch white rabbit.

Because Elwood is the only person who can see Harvey, his meddling relatives decide that he needs a prolonged stay at a "pleasant" health resort. Scenes of comedy and then sadness occur when Elwood is nearly forced to forget his imaginary companion. Harvey alone remains calm, proving that reality is not always desirable.

Harvey was directed by Miss Nedra Stimpfle and Susan Lindberg. Greg Marus played a convincing Elwood, and Susie Littlepage was perfect as the overwrought sister. The entrance of an overstuffed society matron portrayed by Connie Tippett provoked roars of laughter. But, of course, always in the spotlight was Harvey.

Court Fool Tucks The Moon Into Child's Palm In Many Moons

Fearing for the Princess' failing health, Kathy Postle, as the nurse, offers a tart to Lenore (Cathy McKown).

Between scenes, the jester (Dick Race) steps before the curtain to question his audience about the progress of the play.

Many Moons, the whimsical children's play by James Thurber, tells the story of the wistful Princess Lenore who has become frail wishing for an inexpressible desire. The anxious concern of her father, the king, is not eased by the pompous mutterings of the court's three wisemen.

Scorned as a lowly creature by the wisemen and their shrewish wives, the jester solves the problem by using a child's simple logic, and presents the Princess with her own private moon.

Steve Berry amusingly portrayed the bumbling, blustery king, and Cathy McKown played pensive Princess Lenore. Dick Race was effective in the part of the soft-hearted jester.

Directed by Miss Nedra Stimpfle and Sally Sidebottom, the Thespian production delighted the imaginations of both adults and children.

Student director Sally Sidebottom jots down notes for the improvement of Many Moons.

When the king challenges him to find a way to get the moon for Princess Lenore, the Royal Wizard, played by Mike Howard, must invert himself in order to ponder the problem.

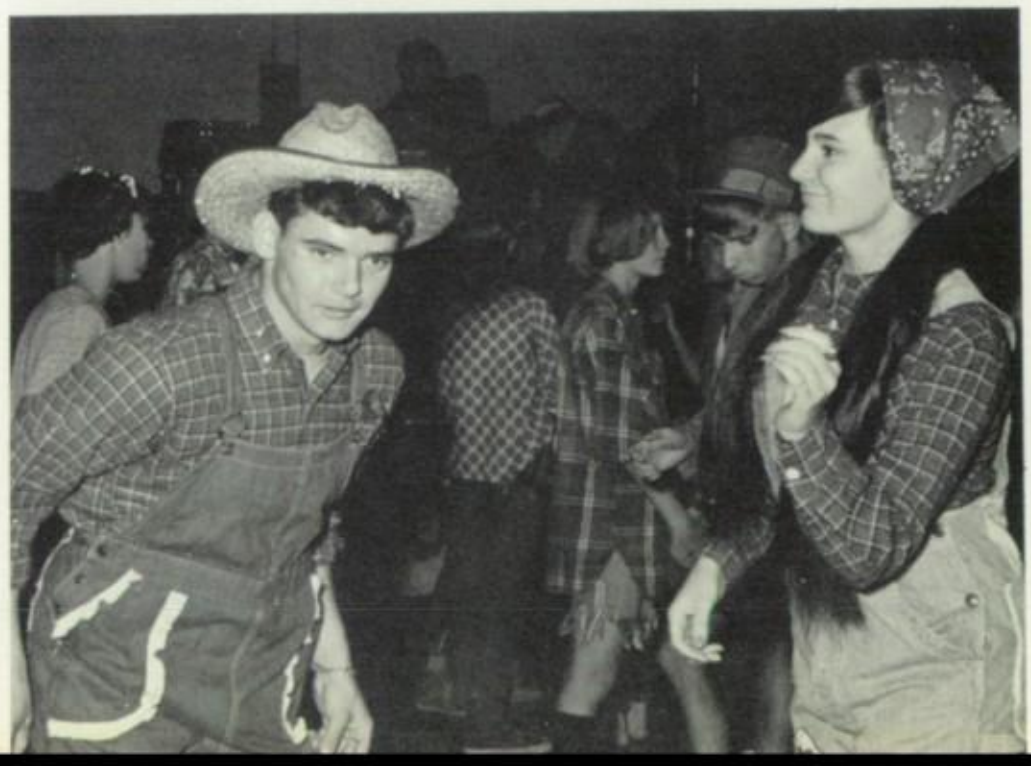
WHS Hillbillies Celebrate Dogpatch-Style

Dogpatch set the theme for the Sadie Hawkins Dance which was sponsored by the Worthington Teen Council and held in the high school gym. Al Capp's fictitious community was fully represented, even to the outhouse in the center of the gym. Murals of Dogpatch's noted citizens decorated the walls, while a huge still dominated one corner.

Students could take advantage of Marryin' Sam's services, and Dogpatch-type marriage licenses could be obtained. Clothes were hillbilly style, and the judging of the costumes and the crowning of King Sadie, Statler Gilfillen, were the dance's main events. Throughout the evening entertainment was provided by two local bands, the Rebounds and the Brik Wal.

Farmhands Greg Nesser and Norma Lehman take a turn dancing to the sound of the Brik Wal.



Annually, the Sadie Hawkins Dance transforms Worthington's gymnasium into Dogpatch, U.S.A.

Marryin' Sam notarizes the marriage of Sue Rogers and her date, and the occasion calls for the exchanging of rings.

Jaycee, Mr. John Bergman, crowns Karen Robbins, 1966 Halloween Queen.

Cold Halloween Speeds Up Karen's Coronation

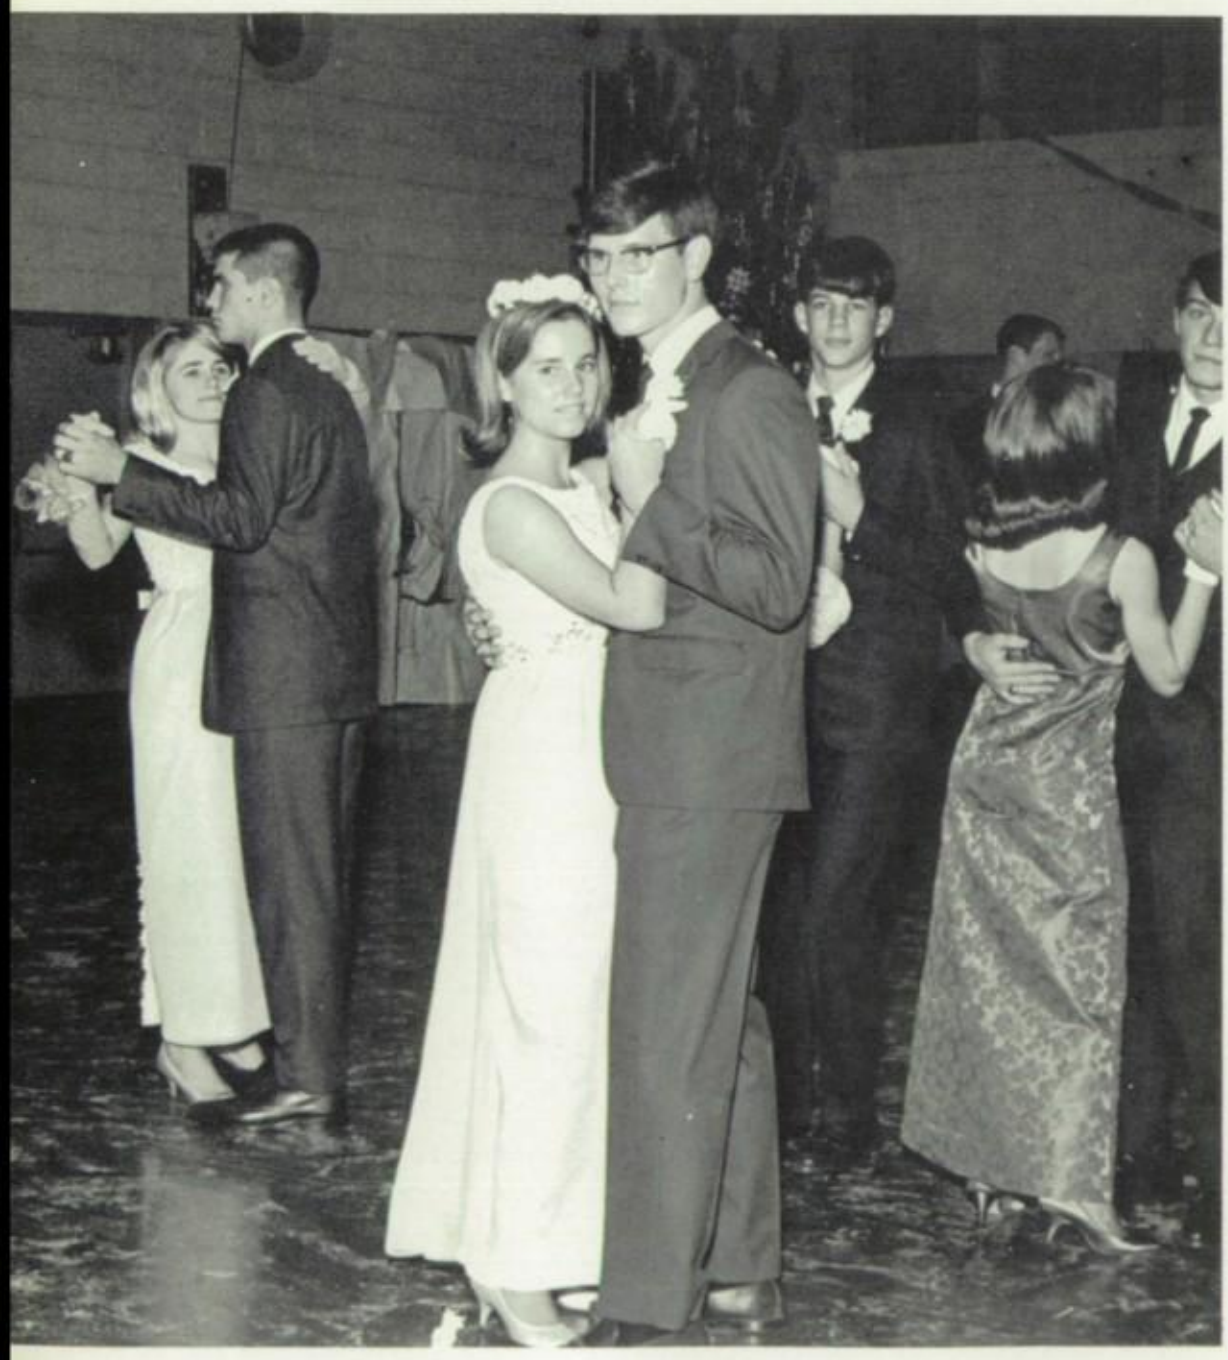
Crowned amid shivering Halloweeners, Halloween Queen Karen Robbins, and her attendants, Sue Kreft, senior; Sally Shannon, junior; Linda Robinson, sophomore; and Nancy Atha, freshman, led around the football field a parade which consisted of the Worthington High School Marching Band, some community floats, and a multitude of motley dressed trick-or-treaters. After the parade, the members of the court and the student spectators rushed to the Jaycee-sponsored canteen where the royalty shared the spotlight with a well-known band, the Fifth Order.

Named to the Halloween court by their classmates, five girls oversaw the October celebration. Seated are Sue Kreft, senior, and Nancy Atha, Freshman. Standing are junior Sally Shannon, Queen Karen, and sophomore Linda Robinson.

Randy Speer, who master-minded B. C.'s Christmas Party, converses with Mrs. Redick, dance adviser.

Dave Scheer and Carol Remen study the not-too miniature dinosaur, the highlight of the decorations.

Yule Guests Step Back To The Stone Age



Cardinal Queen and her court come to the dance floor.

"B. C.'s Christmas Party" was the theme of the 1966 Christmas Formal. Cartoon drawings based on the comic strip B. C. concealed the walls, and a golden dinosaur surrounded by B. C. and his friends dominated the center of the gym. Two giant Christmas trees completed the decorations.

Entertainment was provided by Jimmy Llewellan and the Noveleers; Ellen West, a '66 Worthington graduate; and the Mixed Ensemble.

The highlight of the evening was the crowning of the 1966 Cardinal Queen, Ann Winter, by last year's queen, Kathy Hamilton, and the bestowing of the traditional kiss by Cardinal Business Manager, Dave Foust. Other members of the court were Colleen Carter, Sue Coombs, Nita Day, Margy Fisher, Gwen Huffman, and Sue Kreft.

Amusing cartoons inspire curious comments from guests Jan Love and her date, and Libby Schildknecht and Brent Turner.

The announcement that Ann Winter (right) is the 1966 Cardinal Queen draws from her a gasp of surprise. Members of the court on stage, seniors Margy Fisher and Sue Kreft, beam their approval.

1965 Cardinal Queen Kathy Hamilton steps up to pass her title to Ann Winter. Assisting her is Dave Foust.

Lynn Swearingen, 1966 graduate Gary Kester, Janene Lacy, and Jeff Myers enjoy life in the Stone Age.

Dentist Kitchell, uproariously portrayed by Mike Howard, searches for a tune on his air hose. A subscriber of Susanswerphone, Kitchell is a frustrated composer.

Airy Musical Emerges

Sue McMillan (right) checks out a technical question with Miss Hottenroth, director.

As his dimwitted assistant (Jim Sylvester) gawks, the foxy inspector (John Lucas) trumps up charges against Susanswerphone.

Ella has disappeared. Stan McCormack, as Jeff, ducks into a nearby telephone booth to try to track her down.

Instrumentalists lodge themselves beneath the stage to set up accompaniment for the performers. Mr. Haney, at right, sets tempos and coaches the musical.

With a simple "Hello, there!" Ella (Susie Littlepage) triggers a wild party on the notorious New York subway. To her left the bow-tied Ludwig Smiley (John Baxter) and Jeff (Stan McCormack) shake hands.

From The Chaos Of Ringing Bells

Choir members, under the direction of Mr. Joel Haney and Miss Elaine Hottenroth, creatively staged the gusty musical, Bells Are Ringing, on the weekend of March 11. Susie Littlepage played Ella, an imaginative telephone operator for an answering service. According to the play, Ella cannot help falling in love with the voice of number PL 0-4433, who turns out to be a handsome playwright, Jeff Moss, acted by Stan McCormack.

Cliff Davis, as the suave, double-dealing Sandor, deceives Ella's cousin, Sue (Anne Altick) into unknowingly relaying the coded bets of a bookie ring through her answering service. With the police breathing down her neck and her love affair with Jeff almost shattered, Ella decides to leave Susanswerphone forever. In the end Sandor is nabbed, and Jeff captures Ella just as she prepares to leave.

At the scene of Susanswerphone Margaret Simpson, as Gwynne, chats with Sue (Anne Altick), who is silencing a noisy switchboard.

Ella's friends invade the office of Susanswerphone and square off for a dazzling cha-cha lesson. Carol, played by Carolyn Dean, and Carl, played by Mike Hicks, stand poised at center front ready to lead the number.

Lisa Cowgill and Mike Curtin inspect the tiny trophies lined up for the awards hour.

Dancers swell forward to watch senior athletes being honored.

All Sports Dance Applauds Sportsmen And Presents Seniors With Trophies

With the gymnasium lined in murals demonstrating each sport, couples crowded in for the All Sports Dance. The Cheerleading Club nourished the project, tacking up decorations and gathering trophies for each senior athlete. Over the music of Jimmy Charles, Margaret Simpson emceed the event, while Mr. Koloze presented the trophies. For those who had either manned the teams or applauded them on, the dance proved a festive mixer.

In the flurry of decorating for the All Sports Dance, cheerleaders Sue Frost (left) and Denise Morris shuffle paper flowers.

Seated before animated murals, couples talk things over.

Miss Nault confidently awaits faculty points.

Students take the game seriously and grind out cheers in an unending din.

Faculty Stomps Students 15-9

In Charity Basketball Game

With a shrill bell, a jump ball that marked the start of the student-faculty basketball game shot into the air. Following that toss, the action romped and tumbled across the gym until the scoreboard showed the faculty victors 15-9.

Students howled as their teachers, coached by Mr. Monska, came to the game floor ready for battle. The student team, with Coach Jim Fleeman, made exhausting competition for its instructors.

Game progress was relayed and glorified by sportscaster John Kilgore, who occasionally yielded his microphone to straggling cheerleaders from both sides.

Unspoiled fun prevailed for an hour. When students had filed out, Student Council counted the proceeds from the affair and found over $370 to be split among the heart, cancer, and leukemia funds.

Free-for-alls are very frequent in the student-faculty game.

It's another bucket for the faculty! Mr. Linzell and Mrs. Bernhagen, waiting to receive the wounded, mouth their approval.

Seniors Stage Thurber's Philosophical Male Animal

Drinks make the philosophical commentary between Mike Roberts (above) and Tommy a jumble of wisdom.

For their class play this year, seniors chose the Male Animal by James Thurber and Elliot Nugent, and then studied cues and chased props for an admirable performance under the direction of Mr. David Polk.

Male Animal takes place at Midwestern University where Tommy Turner (Rich DiCenzo) has been quietly teaching. His marriage to the cheerful Ellen (Kathy Denton) has worked out well. When Joe Ferguson (John Washburn), an old boyfriend of Ellen and former MU football hero, blows in for the Michigan football game, Tommy's little set-up begins to tremble.

Ellen is overjoyed to see Joe, and Tommy's problems worsen when he finds himself in the middle of an academic fist-fight. Tommy clings to his stand; he cannot desert what he knows to be right, even though Ellen quits him and stalks off to the game with Joe.

Later, after a few drinks, Tommy challenges Joe to a fight. Although the results are disastrous for her husband, Ellen finally recognizes him for the grand male animal he is, and runs back to stand up with him.

It's a get-together which brings most of the Male Animal cast into Tommy Turner's living room.

Senior Picnic Ignites The Graduation Spree

On May 24 the 12:05 bell released a horde of seniors dressed in T-shirts and sawed-off jeans to the shelterhouse for a class picnic. Camped on the innerbank, seniors wolfed down sack lunches, free Cokes, and ice cream bars.

When supplies were out, the group shuffled up to the football field where students ganged up in homerooms for some fast-moving games. Besides a relay and water balloon throw, seniors knotted together old cloths, belts, and legs for a three-legged race.

Struggling back to the shelterhouse, the class flopped onto welcome chairs to listen to Bob Marvin—Flippo on WLW-C-TV.

The Gay Nineties With Barbershop Quartet And Beer Garden

When Prom guests arrived at the school on May 20, the gym was thrown open, dressed for an evening in the Gay Nineties. Entering from the rear of the school, couples passed down a lane lined with antique shoppes. Juniors had stacked glass beer mugs in one of these shoppes and gave them away that night as souvenirs.

Immense white pillars split the gym in half. Tables spread with brightly-checkered cloths made a huge bar of half of the gym. With the sounds of a dance band and barbershop quartet behind them, dancers could refresh with cake and punch, or even root beer and pretzels if they wanted. When they had eaten and talked their fill, guests slid out into the ballroom which packed the rest of the gym.

Outside in the lobby, a brick walk lined with trees and flowers meandered through a garden studded with birds in old-fashioned cages. Chairman Jodi Baber headed the whole operation, which took detailed imagination, making the 1967 Prom a thrilling evening.

In the bar, Karen Robbins and Corky Kilch exchange a whispered comment.

Having just run into a dead end, Prom guests Libby Schildknecht and Chuck DeWitt reverse their direction and head back down the lane of old shoppes.

While bartenders parcel out punch and pretzels for another onslaught of customers, Prom guests lounge against the bar.

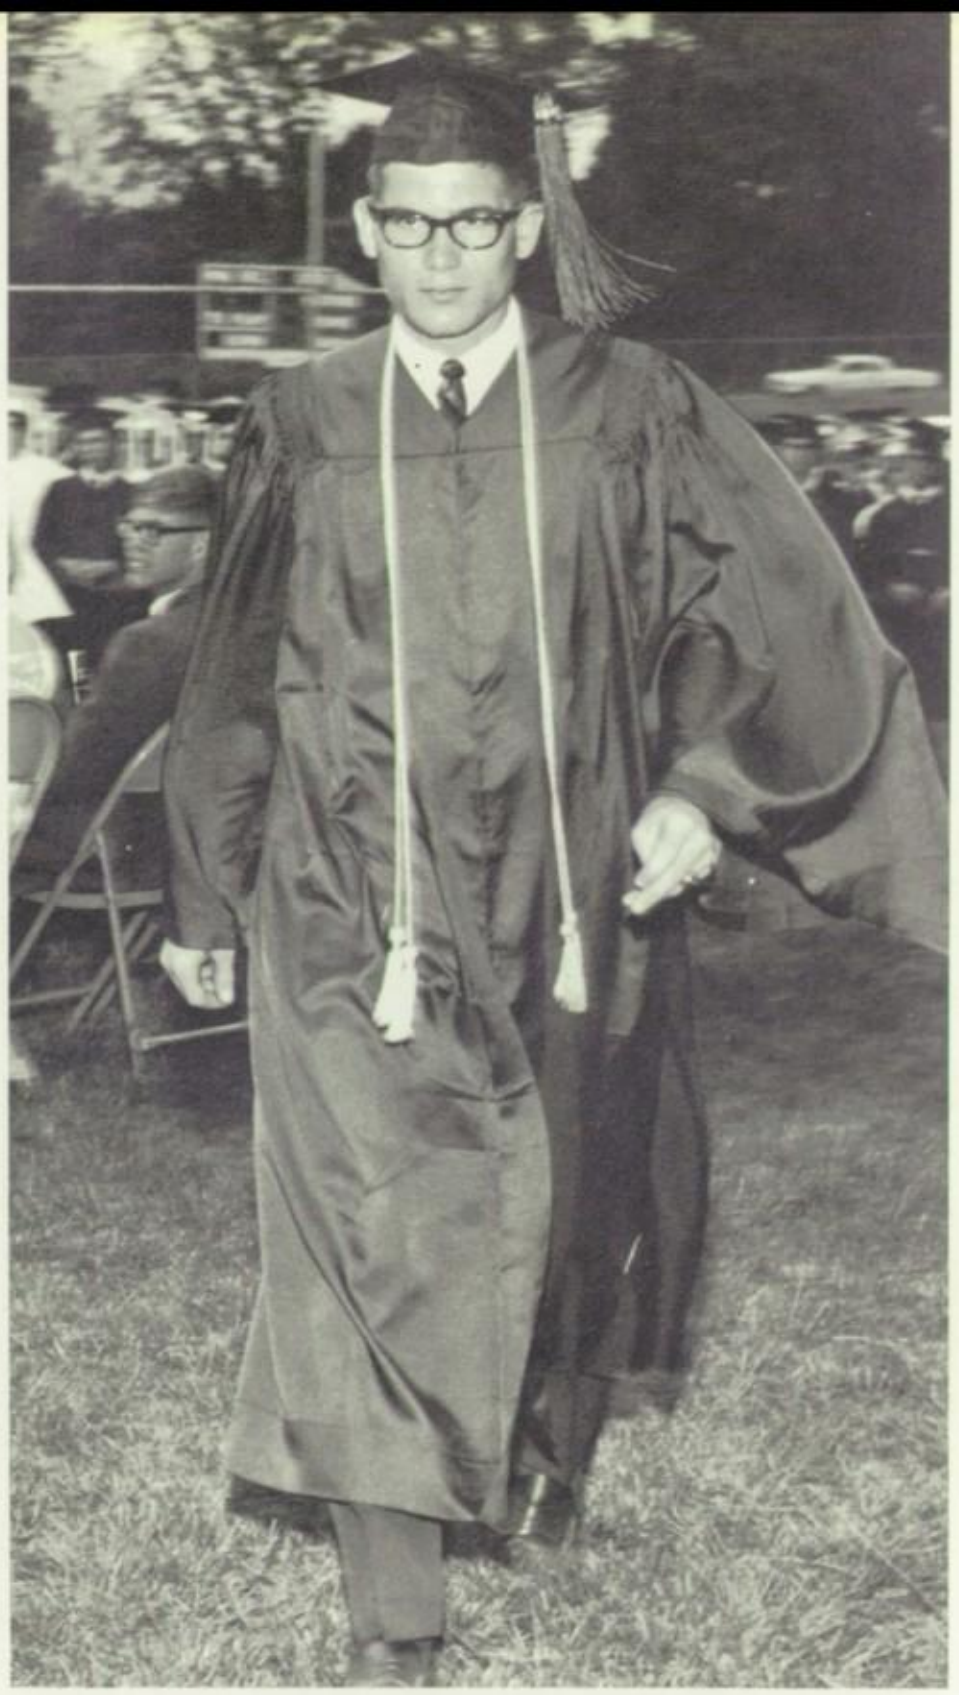
Diplomas For 376 Seniors

To the tones of "Coronation March," seniors filed into the gym for Baccalaureate on Sunday, June 4. The Reverend Norman DeWolfe called the invocation and the benediction. After several anthems, the Reverend Dr. W. Edge Dixon of the Methodist church spoke of "A Growing Faith in a Changing Time."

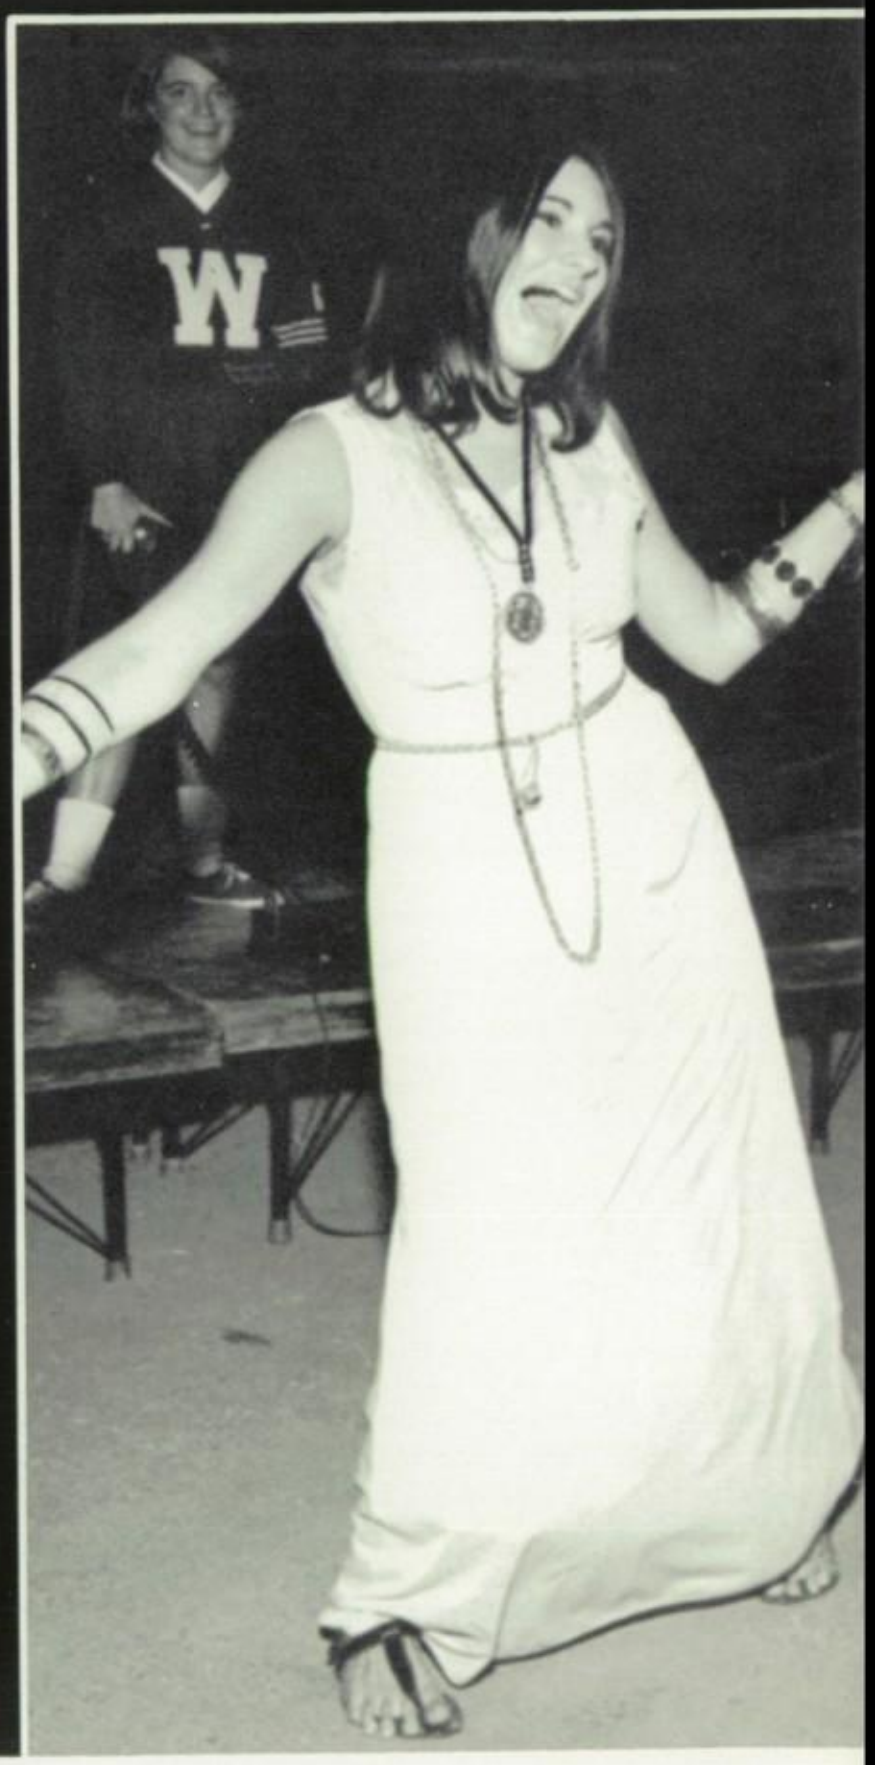
At 8:00 on June 8 Worthington's Symphonic Band set the stately tempo of "Pomp and Circumstance," and 376 seniors marched onto the athletic field for the 1967 Commencement. An invocation by the Reverend Theron Smith opened the way for a few words from Class President Hobby Harbrecht, Valedictorian Lynn Griffith, and Salutatorian Cathy Coulter. The Charles E. Jefferson Awards went to Misses Griffith and Coulter, while Mark Bauer received the Heischman Scholarship Award, and Jim Fleeman, the brand new Faculty Memorial Scholarship.

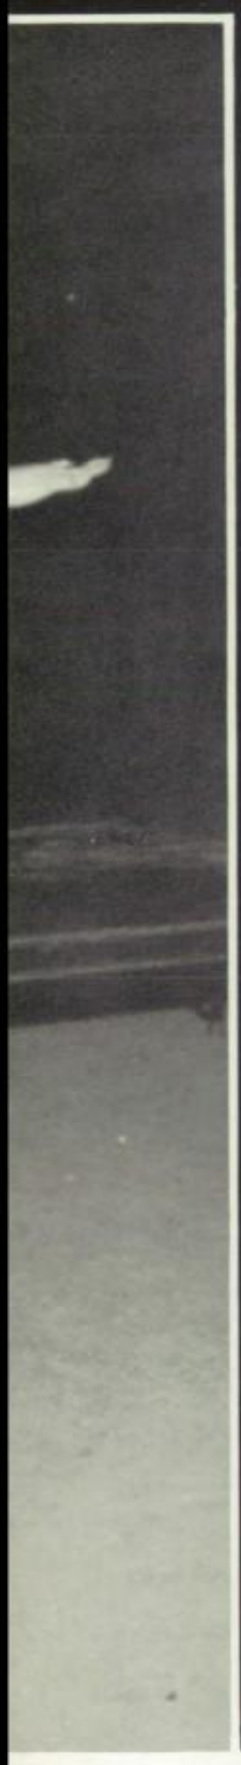
"Tomorrow" was the theme for a fitting talk by Mr. Kenneth B. Creasy of the Ohio House of Representatives. For the presentation of the diplomas, Dr. G. Robert Holsinger and Dr. George H. Bonnell came forward. It was after one-third of the diplomas had been awarded that a gentle rain began to fall, and some of the audience left. Commencement continued, however, and the rain ceased just before Meyerbeer's "Coronation March"—signalling the Recessional—had begun.



Jim Fleeman moves to the platform to receive the first Faculty Memorial Award.

Followed by the two Barb Bakers, Mr. Merrilees launches the trek to the football field for Commencement processional.





Organizations

Much of the vitality of school life at Worthington could be credited to a string of organizations that were formed to cover almost every area of interest.

Students stayed after school to learn the art of self-defense in Y-Teens, or to choose a children's play for Thespians. Future nurses toured hospitals, astronomers came to the observatory at night to peer through the telescope, and Varsity "W" boys knocked on doors to collect money for the Heart Fund drive.

Working, researching, and learning, club members gave of themselves, and the results were rewarding to the school and to the Worthington community.

Orchestras Delve Into Symphonies And Modern Works

Taking over the baton during the second semester, Mr. David Keane rehearsed and polished the two orchestras for the annual Symphony in Spring concert. Every kind of music – from Telemann to Brahms – found its way into the folders of the Chamber Orchestra and the Senior Symphony. One of the most fascinating types was Mr. Keane's own "Four Pieces for Orchestra," a work involving such modern composition techniques as the twelve-tone row.

To supplement their regular rehearsal work, some interested players banded into string quartets and one string and percussion ensemble. Building toward a program which will eventually accomodate musicians at any level of ability and interest, the music department secured excellent personnel, as well as such invaluable equipment as stereo speakers.

For Exchange Concerts And Football Shows

By listening to the winter concert, Spring Spectacular, and outdoor concert, Worthington inhabitants could realize the intense efforts which went into the high school band program. The Reserve and Concert Bands benefited musicians with valuable playing experience and training for the highly selective Symphonic Band, while the Stage Band set to work on a myriad of modern jazz and pop music numbers.

In a brand new exchange program, the Northmont High School Band from near Dayton, Ohio appeared before Worthington's student body. Late in February the Symphonic Band packed itself into buses and headed for a guest performance and overnight stay in Dayton. After a showing at Northmont, the Symphonic Band treated its own student body to some selections to be played later at the annual Spring Spectacular. At last, all three bands got together for a Concert Under the Stars, marked by novelty pieces and plenty of pranks.

Dust rose from the practice field where Marching Band members drilled every day throughout the football season. Under the direction of Mr. Hartwell, hearty volunteers from the three regular bands learned snappy routines and music for glittering half-time shows.

Girls' Choir, Girls' Glee, Mixed Chorus Score At Concerts

Peopled with students wanting to sing for the love of singing, Mixed Chorus, Girls' Glee Club, and Girls' Choir reassembled again this year. Members of ninth grade Girls' Glee Club sang to audiences at the Christmas and spring concerts.

Upperclass boys and girls who wanted to sing without trying out for a more advanced group made up the Mixed Chorus. Turquoise ensembles outfitted members of Girls' Choir, an auditioned group which in the past has proven to be the stepping stone to the elite Worthington High School choir.

Singing throughout the year, students took advantage of this chance to enjoy themselves and to prime their voices for more difficult singing.

Choir And Ensembles Tour, Make Guest Appearances

With all its weeks of rehearsal and pages of catchy tunes, Bells Are Ringing was presented this year by the choir. Members also supplied music for school assemblies and serenaded conventioneers at FBLA's state meeting in Columbus.

Boys', Girls', and Mixed Ensembles were three outgrowths of the choir which molded themselves into delightful performing groups. Girls' Ensemble seized chances to sing for the Republican Women's Club, Worthington Women's Club, and the PTA, as well as the usual Christmas and spring concerts.

At Christmas time the schedule for Mixed Ensemble was choked with engagements. The ensemble transported itself to sing before the Welcome Wagon, the Brookside Women's Music Club, Sertoma Club, and Worthington's non-teaching staff. At the Christmas assembly, the ensemble treated the student body to a musical version of "T'was the Night Before Christmas." Television cameras rolled as members sang on behalf of Kinder Key on WLW-C-TV. Even more time was taken up in singing for ROTC's Christmas party and Worthington's own Christmas Formal.

Introducing juniors to the gadgets and requirements of yearbook production, the Cardinal staff attracted and trained writers and photographers for the next year's work. With Dave Foust in charge of business arrangements, Helen Weller took over the editor's position. A new flash attachment for the camera brightened pictures and saved precious time to improve the book.

As yearbookers constructed lay-outs and counted copy, the business staff culled orders for books from the student body and perfected plans for fund raising events. After a canteen featuring Sir Timothy and the Royals, the group arranged elections and crowned the Cardinal Queen at the Christmas Formal. Headquarters for the yearbook were in the room of the adviser, Miss Hottenroth.

Acropolis Taps WHS Talent; Newsy Chronicle Prints Itself

Newer news, more pictures, and lower prices were three trademarks of the 1966-67 Cardinal Chronicle. Publishing for the first time in the school's own offset press allowed Worthington High's newspaper to undergo a major evolution. A bigger, six-page edition, vended by Student Council representatives, went on sale in homerooms almost every two weeks.

Journalism class staffed the paper, with Martin Conrad as editor-in-chief, Mark Forman as news editor, and Sheryl Verdick as circulation editor. Adviser Mr. Mansfield exposed his class to a speaker from the OSU journalism department, as well as tours through the headquarters of hometown newspapers, the Ohio State University Lantern and the Columbus Dispatch.

Budding authors, poets, and artists all created in part Worthington High School's literary magazine, the Acropolis. An experience in thought for contributors, editors, and readers alike, its production involved the entire school. Any student could offer his favorite creations for consideration. The Acropolis staff then set to work reading literature, choosing illustrations, and laying out pages. Editor Sylvia Wenden and Adviser Mrs. Lawrence shaped and perfected the final product.

Student Council Renews Bonfire Custom

"Innovations" is a fitting word to describe the projects that were undertaken by Student Council this year. President Dick Donovan and Adviser Mrs. Redick helped to usher in some drastically new policies. Stirring up lots of comment, a new canteen plan was launched calling for Student Council to hire bands for every canteen, take one-third of the profits, and leave the remainder to the sponsor clubs. Money harvested in this way was resown into clubs which were floundering financially.

In another pertinent move, a committee was formed which drew up an efficient outline limiting the number of club offices that an individual could hold. Homecoming festivities this year displayed some unique touches thanks to Student Council. Renewing an old custom, representatives initiated a pre-game bonfire and float parade.

With profits given to charity, a rollicking student-faculty basketball game was staged before a sell-out crowd at twenty-five cents a head. As a fitting closing for such a group, Student Council set up a leadership conference for officers-elect of the school. Student Council's own officers served as fine examples in the fulfillment of their duties: beside President Donovan stood Vice-President Tom Almy, Secretary Mary Schildknecht, Treasurer Mark McDougle, and Recorder Kathy DeMerit.

Bits Of Mexican Tradition Surround Spanish Honor Students

Speeches, conventions, and parties crowded the calendars of those Spanish-speaking upperclassmen selected for membership in Spanish National Honor Society. At one meeting members assembled before Mrs. Pashovich to hear her speak of her homeland, Chile. Mr. Andrews dropped in another time to describe his trip to South America. America.

Christmas passed in true Spanish tradition with a party where two bulging pinatas were shattered. Throughout the year Mrs. Clausing coached the operation in alliance with President Anne Hale.

At the end of the first semester terms of the officers spun to a close. Executive duties passed from the hands of President Hale, vice-presidents Dave Atha and Tom Almy, secretaries Judy Crow and Karen Robbins, and treasurers Mark Bauer and Jackie McKee. Yet the busiest part of the year lay ahead. When state convention time rolled around, two members stepped to the front: Ann Gulick was elected to the presidency of the state, and Anne Hale won the vice-presidency.

Cheerleaders Foster Spirit With Vivid Banners, Signs

More than any other organization, the Cheerleading Club bolstered school spirit. Sprawling posters, prepared by club members, decked the halls on the day of every sports event, and athletes found their lockers decorated with clever good-luck signs before games. On football and basketball Parents' Nights, honored parents, sporting corsages and signs, watched the games from seats reserved for them by the cheerleaders.

To crown their efforts, cheerleaders worked to put on an All Sports Dance, the first in two years. At that time hats were tipped to all athletes, and seniors were presented trophies.

Under the counsel of Miss Fawcett, who took over after Mrs. Ross left, girls trekked through homerooms and around football games selling booster badges, key chains, and shakers. Funds from after-school bake sales, a Thanksgiving canteen, and the All Sports Dance served to back worthwhile projects.

At the spring banquet girls watched as Margaret Simpson (pres.), Sue Benner (vice-pres.), Margy Fisher (sec.), and Beth Polley (treas.) passed their posts to new officers.

Thespians Create Plays; NHS Rounds Up Books For School

Attempting to recognize exceptional ability in the areas of dramatics, leadership, scholarship, and citizenship were two organizations, Thespians and National Honor Society. Members of Thespians were selected on a point system, and enrollment in NHS was by a vote of the faculty.

Recruiting stage crews, selecting casts, and training make-up experts were only a few of the jobs that Thespians took over with the production of two plays. Whether staging Harvey or Many Moons, the club discovered plenty of room for members who were willing to work hard.

Lively improvisations featuring Thespians typified meetings which were designed to improve dramatic talent. POG sent its producer, Sally Sexton, to one meeting. At another, three Thespian groups, Worthington's included, convened at Bexley to swap ideas and to share anecdotes.

Miss Nedra Stimpfle, dramatics teacher, advised Thespians and directed their productions. Involved in the organization's unending business, Stan McCormack (pres.), Steve Berry (vice-pres.), Francie Huggard (sec.), and Randy Dipner (treas.) led the operations of Thespians.

Tucked away in two far-flung corners of the high school were National Honor Society's east and west bookstores. Each morning before school an NHS member trooped to his post to sell books to students and teachers.

President Jim Fleeman and Vice-President Dick Donovan summoned members to take part in an assembly at which outstanding scholars were presented to the student body and new NHS members were tapped. In addition to the leadership of the president and vice-president, Beth Arter and Anne Altick gave of their time to be NHS treasurer and secretary respectively.

To be initiated into NHS, each new member must sign the register. Above, Secretary Anne Altick oversees as Steve Amerine signs in.

Pep Club, Varsity "W" Boost Sinking School Spirit

"And the beat goes on." Pounding out a routine, the Pep Club stirs up spirit at a basketball game at Arlington. Although the Cards lagged at half-time, a fiery third quarter pushed them ahead 59-55.

Basketball fans at this season's games watched eighty girls file past, pile into the bleachers, and begin two hours of non-stop cheering. Initiated and captained this year by Sue Frost and Beth Polley, the Pep Club arrived at games dressed in the school's colors. With members in red shirts forming a vivid "W" amid a blue field, the club clapped and shouted with enough energy to raise the pulses of the games' crowds.

Athletes grouped together to promote and enrich their program through Varsity "W." Fans swarming in for football games were met by Varsity "W" men who directed traffic in the parking lot. Other members threaded their way through the bleachers selling football programs.

To insure crowds at away basketball games, the club hired buses and stocked them with high-spirited students. Knocking on doors all over Worthington, the boys collected over $2300 for the Heart Fund in their year's finest effort. For their own enjoyment, boys witnessed a basketball game played by the wacky Harlem Globetrotters, listened to a lacrosse coach from Ohio State, and helped judge cheerleading try-outs.

With Mr. West as adviser, President Dave Atha, Vice-President John Donovan, Secretary John Titus, and Treasurer Tim West guided the athletes.

GAA Calendar Weighted

With Ski Trips, Picnics

Signs posted all over the girls' locker room early in the year announced a picnic at the shelterhouse for all members of Girls' Athletic Association. With old members bringing a new girl along, the afternoon of football and food proved to be a fun-packed kick-off for the 1966-67 club year.

Program Chairman Annette Davis engineered plans for a clamorous canteen in January, at which the Fifth Order supplied music. Profits were applied to a frosty trip to Seven Springs, Pennsylvania, and to a camp weekend at McKay Lodge.

Girls swarmed the gym after school regularly for GAA intramurals. Posters created by Adviser Miss Bach told of tryouts, practices, and games scheduled for class teams in volleyball, basketball, and field hockey. A highlight of the year was a trip to see the Columbus Checkers battle at ice hockey. Girls tugged on skates afterwards for fun on the Coliseum ice.

Active GAA members elected senior Beth Arter to the presidency of their club; Bev Clendenen became vice-president; Nancy Young, secretary; and Sarah Baker, treasurer.

"Prejudice" became the subject of the year for members of the Jr. Hi-Y Club. After hearing a social worker, a minister, and a psychiatrist probe the issue, the boys decided to find out for themselves the extent of Worthington's prejudice problems.

With members of Varsity "W," Hi-Y boys solicited Worthington for the Heart Fund Drive. Food for the needy was the target of another collection campaign. Then on May 6, hungry patrons of the Ox Roast found themselves customers of volunteer Hi-Y boys.

With Mr. Apple and Mr. Bohl serving as club counselors, President Brian McClatchie, Vice-President Roger Stow, and Secretary Tom Conrad spearheaded the club's efforts.

Periodically throughout the year, a multitude of girls who shared a common zeal for skiing came together. Their Ski Club, an offshoot of GAA, viewed skiing movies and scheduled several sensational weekends. Although bad weather put a damper on most of their plans, the girls managed to escape for one weekend to Seven Springs, Pennsylvania. Functioning without officers, the club raised money by selling homemade popcorn balls.

Hi-Y Hides Easter Candy, Prompts Children's Egg Hunt

Among the opportunities dreamed up for junior and senior boys of the Sr. Hi-Y Club were experiences in mock government. Near election time, members roamed from house to house delivering voter information to Worthington citizens. Government was the theme again when, on County Citizenship Day, Statler Gilfillen, Mike Mason, and Gary Wagner held county offices. On Youth in Government Day, Mason and Jim Fleeman represented WHS.

When Christmas came, members caroled in the streets for Kinder Key. The March of Dimes received the results of an extensive Hi-Y drive. On the day after Easter, neighborhood children swarmed over the field near the Olentangy River, looking for chocolate eggs hidden by Hi-Y members.

Drivers and their navigators reported one morning to the high school, the starting point of Hi-Y's road rally. Mapped out by President Mason, the rally's course took the drivers on a complicated race. With Mason, Vice-President Statler Gilfillen, Secretary Fritz Purtz, and Treasurer Gary Wagner supplied the remainder of the Sr. Hi-Y leadership.

Sr. Y-Teens Become Yoga Experts

Sue Reimers (left) and Ann Winter finish up a joke scrapbook to be given to hospital patients.

Where else but at a Sr. Y-Teens meeting could a girl both try yoga and marvel at a style show? Programs this year were as varied and modern as the people who took part in them. Besides sampling yoga and style shows, junior and senior girls picked up clues on everything from Unitarianism to lacrosse, fashion, and beauty.

Activities alternated between relaxation and service. By vending doughnuts every Thursday after school, Sr. Y-Teens earned enough to donate twenty-five dollars to a needy family. Donning sweatshirts and jeans, girls drove downtown to help renovate a slum house. Similar outfits served for a riotous Gym Night, in which Hi-Y and Varsity "W" boys teamed up with Y-Teens for volleyball and basketball contests.

Whetstone Y-Teens swapped comments with WHS girls when they all bunched together for a spread. A similar invitation from Arlington meant another great evening of socializing.

Sumptuous banqueting closed the year. Girls pushed away their desserts to witness a moving ceremony, as President Ann Winter, Vice-President Kathy DeMerit, Secretary Anne Altick, and Treasurer Holly Church gave up their offices.

As they mused of their ideals as Y-Teens, girls chatted about their activities this year. The Jr. Y-Teen cabinet rallied against its members in a spirited Powder Puff football game. Girls heard first-hand of the rehabilitation of juvenile delinquents when the Training Institute of Central Ohio sent a speaker to a Y-Teen conference. A delegate from Temple Israel explained the Jewish religion. Hair stylists and models completed the roster.

Responsible Students Take On Office Duties

Ruffling through the files is junior Chris Shama, an aide in the east guidance office.

To run the two main offices crisply and effectively, officials recruited a crew of girls to help the office staff. At different times, the workers served as receptionists, messengers, and secretaries. As they answered phones, delivered notes, and sorted the mail, these assistants smoothed out the entire office operation.

Assistants in the library pattered about checking books, collecting fines, and reshelving volumes. In addition to shuttling library mail back and forth, it was the job of the staff to hush the conversations that had grown too noisy for study.

With Mrs. Bernhagen, the school nurse, teaching in classes all over the school system, the health office was often left in the hands of selected student aides. Having earned first aid cards as sophomores, these girls could supply simple help to patients. Especially for those not planning health careers, girls were exposed to valid experience—hard to come by in any other way.

Advisers in the two guidance offices relied on an able battery of students to run messages and answer phones. Giving up their study halls, these students worked to save the guidance counselors much time.

School directories went on sale in every homeroom; business students typed and duplicated for groups at low prices; and children at Poindexter Village received stockings of Christmas candy. Behind these efforts, Future Business Leaders of America practiced the trades they were learning.

When not out promoting such thoughtful drives, members came to meetings for exposure to speakers. Mr. Webb spoke on using imagination in business; Reverend Baldwin lectured on business communication.

At Whitehall, Worthington officers, Mary Webb (pres.), Barb McNaughton (vice-pres.), Kay Crowner (sec.), and Virginia Johnston (treas.), created and installed a sister FBLA chapter. Then in February, members made the Neil House of Columbus their stomping ground when they hosted the state FBLA convention. Worthington's own Ron Bellar superintended the massive proceeding as state president.

For those students speculating on careers in health, September opened a year crammed with guest speakers and service projects. Health Careers president, Lynnette Davis, working with Adviser Mrs. Bernhagen, lined up a house full of speakers.

Dr. Stuhl, a missionary man, revealed the problems involved in setting up a hospital in Liberia. Experts in medical diatetics, candy-striping, and occupational and physical therapy came before the group with informative, inspiring discussions.

One morning in March, members boarded a bus that was bound for the Center of Science and Industry. At Christmas time, patients at the Ohio Home for the Aged and Infirm received a batch of tiny wisemen, created for them by the Health Careers Club. Again at Easter, members shaped charming flower baskets for the elderly. Rounding out the service area was a party thrown for the young people of the Teenage Diagnostic Center.

Mothers of members came to the traditional Rose Tea and heard a recap of the year's activities. That event marked the end of service for club officers. Stepping down were President Davis, Vice-Presidents Karen Mickelsen and Marsha Barkhurst, Secretary Kathy Lewis, and Treasurer Marilyn Earley.

Future Teachers Grade Tests To Win A Try At Teaching

Nancy Galloway hears plans for an FTA picnic.

"Forty service points by April" became the battle cry of a host of young people who sought to earn a day of observing and teaching in Worthington schools. Future Teachers of America collected points by tutoring individuals and by helping grade papers.

During National Education Week, the high school loudspeakers rattled with pertinent readings which were prepared by members of FTA. Flowers were rounded up for the faculty on Teacher Recognition Day.

Meetings, called to order by President Jean Scharf, Vice-President Ellen Combs, and Treasurer Annette Davis, featured all kinds of guests. Project Headstart sent a representative one week. Creating some personal interest, two of Worthington High School's teachers, Mrs. Schmidt of Germany and Mr. Pashovich of Chile, addressed the group.

Student teaching became the topic of dissection when two Capital University seniors arrived to give their comments. To help generate ideas in the use of supplementary materials abounding outside the classroom, Mr. Schmidt, of the Center of Science and Industry, offered valid remarks.

When all their work was finished—and service points were earned—FTA members took off for a day to experience a few of the joys and the complexities of teaching.

Erich Shares Austrian Life With Worthington AFS Club

Nancy Young (right) and Sue McMillan dab make-up on Erich Kastner. This operation occurs before an operetta performance of which Erich was in the chorus.

"Buy a share in next year's AFS student," read the signs that lined Worthington halls. For their colossal fund raising endeavor, American Field Service sold shares for twenty-five cents each to help finance Worthington's next guest. People all over the town remembered the fun of hosting the 1967 student, Erich Kastner, of Austria, and they responded whole-heartedly.

From Linz, Austria, where he lived with his mother and brother Kurt, Erich transplanted himself to live for a year with senior Paul Chakroff and family. Speaking English with a powerful touch, Erich was a friendly, often amusing addition to his classes. In America, he skied, hiked, swam, sang, and bicycled with all the love he knew for those activities at home.

Commencement marked Erich's reluctant departure. Until the end of July, he was swept up in a whirlwind bus tour of the U.S.A. with other AFS students. By then it was time to sail to Europe and spend a year in Austria's Universal Military Training program. University would follow. His goals were uncertain: perhaps he would decide to be an English teacher, maybe a lawyer.

Bake sales, canteens, Christmas card sales, and the showing of children's movies added to the kitty heaped up from the "share" drive. Enthusiastic AFS'ers donated information about the club and sold paperback books to patrons of the Ox Roast.

At one meeting, the room was filled with spectators who were ready for a talk by Mrs. Arter, the American "mother" of the 1966 Equidorian AFS student, Lucho. Organizing this and other meetings were President Holly Church, Vice-President Marianne Randles, Secretary Barb Kaser, and Treasurer Bev Caldwell.

Erich steps up to speak to his school in the annual AFS assembly. Following his speech, fond classmates gave him a standing ovation.

Caesar dies before the International Club, as Latin students restage that spectacle.

When foreign language teachers unveiled plans for a club which would mix language students, no one knew for sure what would come of it. By the year's end, however, International Club had taken hold and mushroomed into one of the school's largest organizations. Response to the idea was tremendous—especially among underclassmen. The very first meeting spilled from the library into the cafeteria. Right away, a cabinet with two representatives from each of the four languages swung into action.

Meetings revolved about the effort to deepen the students' understanding of foreign cultures. Spanish students in the mood for a fiesta swept through the hall one evening, coaching their cohorts in Spanish dances. Fascinating customs came to the surface at Christmas time, when students enlightened each other as to the Christmas traditions of France, Spain, and Germany.

Around the Ides of March, Latin students draped themselves in sheets to produce an amusing restaging of Caesar's death. Even Spring Feast Day passed with all due observation by Latin students. With a banquet at which they journeyed around the world via foreign dishes, International Club students finished off the year.

Contentions, rebuttals, sub-points, and affirmatives surrounded members of the Debate Club, as they orated and argued their way to a highly successful year. Traveling to Johnson Park, the team picked up a trophy—a prize awarded only to the team whose negative and affirmative sides won every round. President Tom Almy brought many honors to his school, as he charged through the year, losing no debates until the district finals.

Almy and his cabinet, composed of Vice-President Steve Berry, Secretary Randy Dipner, and Treasurer Rennie Beetham, laid the groundwork and hired the Graypes for a December canteen. There were plenty of places to spend the profits: membership in debating leagues, subscriptions to magazines for argumentative ammunition, and transportation and entrance fees for tournaments.

Photographers And Hams Turn Hobbies Into Valuable Aids

Would-be ham radio operators joined together in a club which made exciting entries into the radio world. Via ham radio, members signaled clear to Austria and contacted the mother of AFS student, Erich Kastner. To see for themselves how well-prepared the United States would be in a national emergency, members set up their equipment in an open field and spent the day contacting as many people throughout the country as possible. On another occasion, station WRFD showed Radio Club members the equipment used in broadcasting. Randy Crews served as president; Bill Warner, as vice-president; Steve Rigsby, as secretary; and Doug Dovenbarger, as treasurer.

Whenever a basketball game careened to an exciting pitch, or a play reached dress rehearsal stages, a Photography Club member reported to snap the event. The results appeared in game programs and publicity posters. Instead of trying to corner profits this year, the club, under the guidance of Mr. Heaps and President Tom Webb, operated as a service to the athletic and dramatic departments.

Chess Club, MHS Map Out Schemes

Attending tournaments in Cleveland, Steubenville, and Columbus, members of the Chess Club tackled complex games and maneuvered their way to a 6½-1½ record. After tucking the Central Ohio trophy into the school's display case, the club entered the state competition and came out in fourteenth place.

President Statler Gilfillen and his cabinet, Vice-President Mike Mason, Secretary Dick Henninge, and Treasurer Kerry Corthell, sponsored a canteen and designed a chess display for the lobby of Worthington's public library.

On the tables of the Military Historical Society, the battles of Austerlitz and Okinawa came back to a vivid recreation in miniature. New this year, the club bought tiny metal soldiers, painted them, and used them to restage famous battles according to set rules. The Napoleonic and Crimean Wars were the subjects of talks presented before the MHS by OSU ROTC members. From his own personal experience, Mr. Rousculp constructed a lively description of World War II in the Pacific.

Advised by Mr. Miller, MHS members designated officers to ease the club through its growing pains. John Jernigan became president; Don Stevens, vice-president; Carl Bryant, secretary; and Roger Gallagher, treasurer.

Astronomers And Ecologists Research Sciences Outside

To study the ties between living things and their surroundings, veterans of the old Outdoor Club founded an Ecology Club for the first time at Worthington. Strongly cabled to the earth science program, the club followed activities in the high school's outdoor laboratory. President Bill Warner, Vice-President Craig Kramer, and Secretary-Treasurer Marsha Barkhurst slated a clean-up and sign-painting campaign for the Nature Trail. Along the river, members later planted trees donated by the Franklin County Soil Conservation group, and set up a food plot for animals. In one absorbing day, the club headed for an exploration of Lake Erie's Bass Islands, checking over the Medina stone quarry en route.

Haunting the school's observatory on clear nights, members of the Astronomy Club spent a year scrutinizing the skies and improving their telescopic equipment. Taking time from observing, the club repaired the observatory's telescope, repaneled the floor, and provided it with a $200 reflector telescope. Members took off to see Perkins Observatory and the planetarium and telescope on view at Otterbein College. President John Morse, Vice-President Alan Austin, Secretary Sylvia Wenden, and Treasurer Lynn Bauer directed the club's lasting improvement of the observatory.

Now that an Astronomy Club member has introduced him to the telescope, freshman Ken Edwards takes over. His earth science class has come to the observatory for a study of the constellations.

Art Club And W-Debs Recruit Speakers For Their Interests

Their work in home economics class sends Paulette Geer (left) and Carol DeVolt to the bookshelf for some official words.

"How clay is thrown on the potter's wheel" was the title of one demonstration that was presented before the Art Club. Students with an enthusiasm for art not only heard such fascinating speakers, but were swept up in some noteworthy projects as well. Every other Tuesday after school, members opened the concession stand to tempt students into buying Art Club pastry. A potluck picnic filled one afternoon in April with games, sketching, and plenty of chow. After a year of helping in artistic projects that were undertaken by different school clubs, artists took a day out for themselves: during May they created and flew their own kites. Organizing the talents and energies of members for these projects were Adviser Mr. Kuyper, President Janet Edwards, Vice-President Sue Plaisted, Secretary Jodi Baber, and Treasurer Geoff Huber.

For home economics buffs, W-Debs followed an exciting retinue to projects and speakers, thus shedding light on the arts of a housewife. Second runner-up to Miss Ingenue America, Sally Sidebottom, and beauty counselor Mrs. Harris appeared before the Debs. For the children of Poindextor Village, the girls shoved batches of cookies into hot ovens. Then Christmas came, and the members could be found peddling cookbooks.

Finally, girls treated their mothers to a sip of tea and light talk with Advisers Miss Fawcett and Mrs. McBurney at the Mothers' Tea. W-Debs' year folded with the retiring of its officers: President Debbie Burkhart, Vice-President Barb DeMerit, and Secretary-Treasurer Carla Duerk.

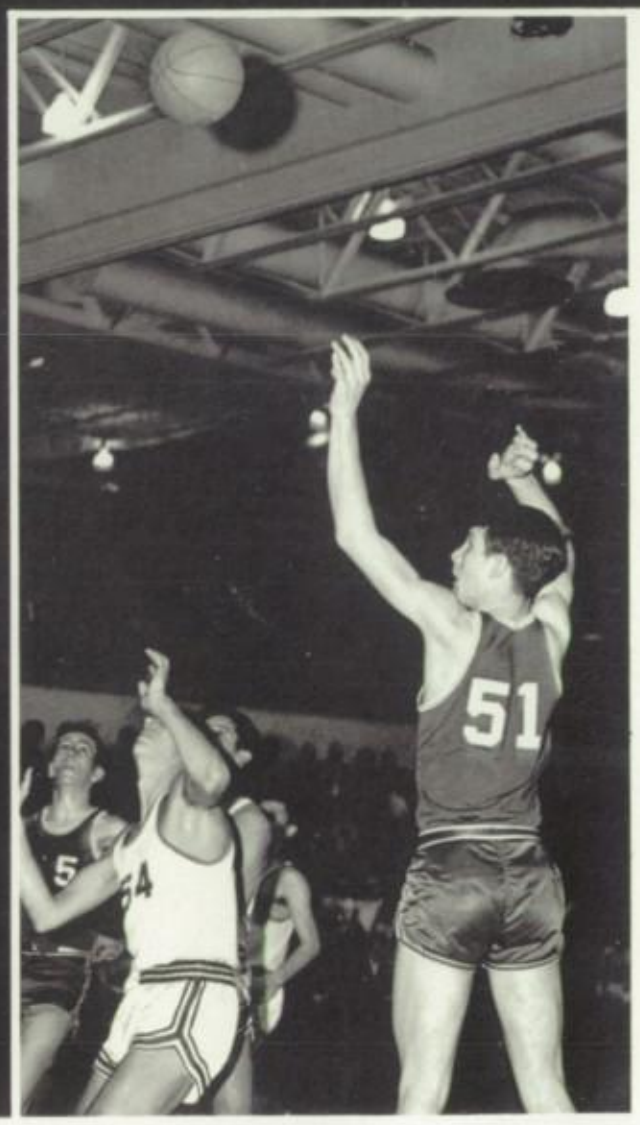
Sports



With blats of buzzers and shrieks of impatient whistles began scores of colorful athletic competitions involving Worthington teams. Swimmers fought to inch ahead of opponents; girls abandoned books to join intramurals. Those contests limelighted athletes who were working with every muscle in their bodies to win. There were many victories; yet, despite all the work, losses came with no consolations or excuses.

Each boy and girl who ran, or led a cheer, or slugged a ball felt periods of pride and satisfaction because he could contribute to a group effort. Learning to build and to stretch their abilities, skilled and unskilled players alike enlarged their vibrant lives.

For the seventh straight year, the championship of the district meet fell to Worthington's cross-country team. Ralph Lowery, Jim Wilson, and Captain John Titus spurred their teammates to a very commendable 6-1 season record.

In relay meets WHS made a fine showing: second in the Lancaster Relays, third in the Miami Relays, and second in our own relays, where more than four hundred boys participated. Taking the district championship, the boys then ran in the regional meet, placing second. From there, Cardinal runners vied in the state contest where Lowery finished ninth and the team placed tenth.

Due to this successful year, Coach Eisenhart became a member of the "Century Club of Coaches" – that is, he has accumulated more than one hundred cross-country victories in his twenty years of coaching at Worthington High School.

Gain 5-5 Season

"You could hear them singing from the field." With those words, Coach Sabock described his uniquely-spirited varsity squad. Members played for the love of football and never stopped fighting, even when pitted against bruising teams which out-weighed them by as much as forty pounds. Heavy injuries, which plagued the team, could have easily broken a less determined group, but these handicaps only seemed to add to the fire which pushed the players to a 5-5 season.

Headed by Co-Captains Greg Nesser and Dan Simcox, the Cards held Arlington (who eventually rolled to one of the top berths in Ohio) to a remarkably low score (7 to Arlington's 19). Mt. Vernon whacked them once, but the Cardinals flew to the challenge in a second unforgettable match with the Yellow Jackets. By scoring two touchdowns in the closing quarter, Worthington finished with a thrilling 20-14 victory.

Banty Rooster awards went to seniors Bob Clarke, Greg Nesser, John Savage, Dan Simcox, and John Washburn. Nesser was the outstanding rusher, while sophomore Dick Atha took honors on the field for his passing ability.

Drafting the outstanding sophomore players to the varsity team put a severe brake to the progress of the reserves this year. The season brought them a 2-5 record.

Freshmen took to the field playing for victories and came up with a smart 4-2 record. Huddled with their teammates were Co-Captains Jeff Grant and Jim Mack.

Swim Team Battles Multiple Problems

To swimmers on the 1966-67 squad, who cultivated a 5-6 record and fifteenth place in the state, the season seemed to be a jinxed one. While Coach Apthorp scoured the vicinity for a pool, Co-Captains John Kilgore and Tom McNeal led their teammates in dry-land calisthenics until the first week of December.

Through the remainder of the season, the team stumbled into Hospitality Inn's pool at 6:00 every morning for work-outs. Those hours were the only ones allowed to the boys to whip themselves into shape for such meets as the Dennison Relays, where they placed sixth, City Relays (fourth), and Malabar Relays (eighth).

Although practice had to be suspended for several weeks because of eye infections, the squad came up with some impressive statistics. Junior Mike Glaros broke the record for the 800-yard individual medley, only to have his time bettered by senior Colin Montgomery. Montgomery scored another star when he set and re-set the 100-yard freestyle record.

In the district meet where the team placed fifth, two champs showed off: Jon Donovan dived for fourth place and Montgomery swept up both 50- and 100-yard freestyle championships. At the state meet Donovan nabbed sixth place honors and Montgomery finished the freestyle events with two fifth places.

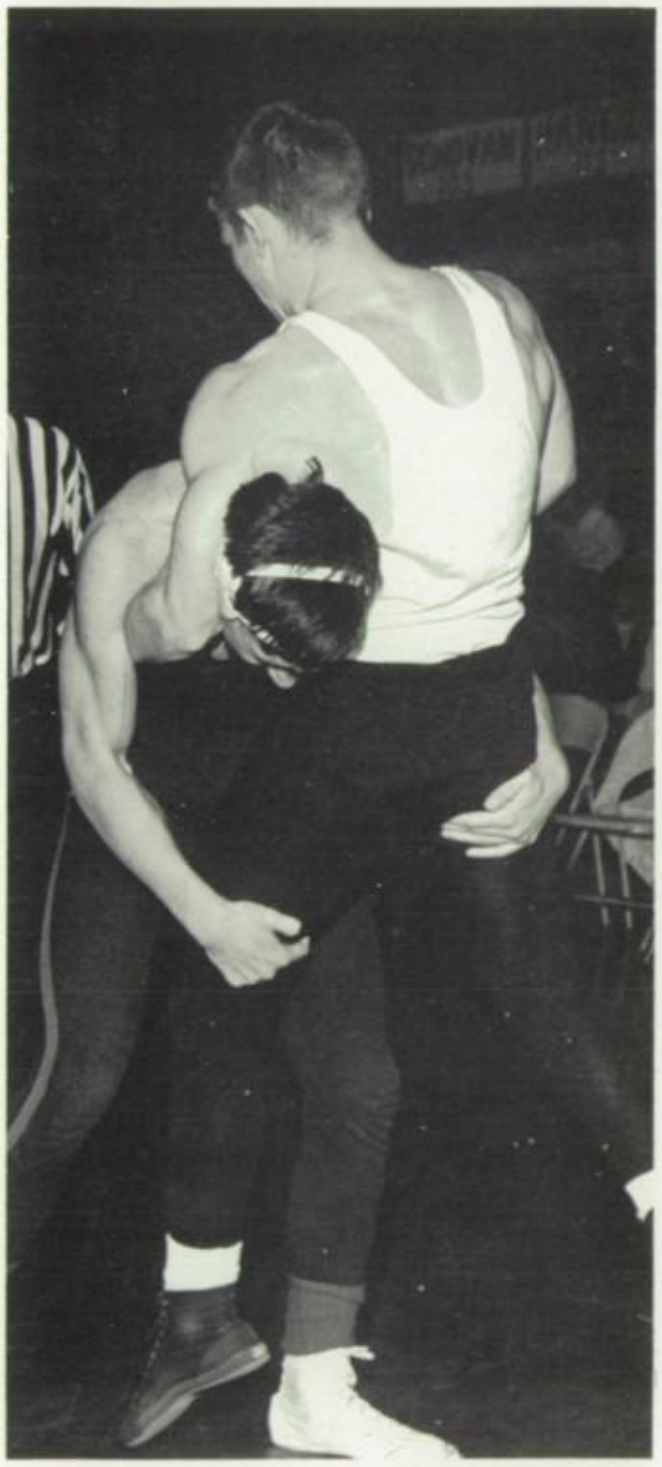
Cards Send Two Grapplers To State Meet

John Washburn's pin-win over Linden McKinley snaps him a first-place ribbon at the All North Invitational.



Attempting a take-down is Steve Harris, who mastered the 154 weight class at the Worthington Invitational by decisioning 5-3 this wrestler from Franklin Heights.

Pitted against some of the toughest teams in the state, the 1966 Cardinal wrestlers wrangled a 5-2 record. One loss was to Maple Heights, a perennial state power, which sustained a spirited Worthington attack and managed a winning score of only 28-11. A 33-15 defeat by DeSales was the only other loss of the season.

After sweeping first place at the All North Invitational, the Cards landed a third at the Top Eight Invitational, tied for first at the Worthington Invitational, and won second at the DeSales Triangular.

During the season Dick Donovan topped the team in both number of pins (eight) and team points (69). Donovan also chalked up a 21-2 record, captured the district, and wrestled in the state meet. Steve Harris finished with a 21-2-1 total and forged on to the state quarterfinals. Tallies found others with excellent records: Bruce Day (17-6-1) and John Washburn (16-5).

From the large company of girls who backed the team throughout the season, the Wrestling Court was chosen. Norma Lehman (left), Queen Gay Joslin (center), and Beth McAllister (right) were honored at the Worthington Invitational, at which time they awarded trophies.

As the referee strains for a view of the action, sophomore heavyweight Greg Voutyras pins a Martins Ferry grappler. With his exciting win, Voutyras not only caught a third place, but also gave Worthington the points needed to tie Martins Ferry for first place at the Worthington Invitational.

Having just swept up top honors by a 7-4 decision over Martins Ferry at the Worthington Invitational, Dick Donovan stoops to receive his first-place kiss from Wrestling Queen Gay Joslin.

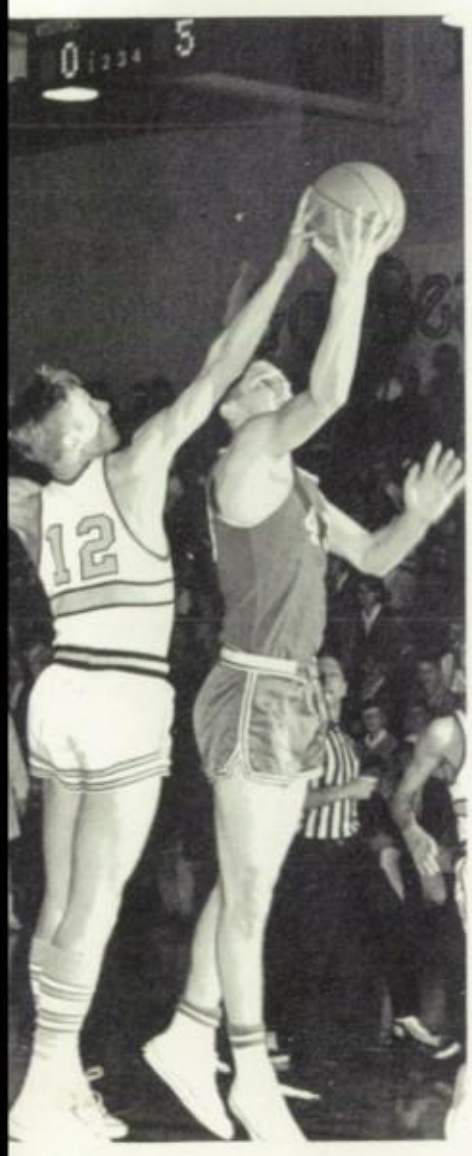
Champions On The Courts

Grind Out A Record 20-2 Season



Senior Mike McClaskey leaves the ground at Arlington in an attempt to direct the ball toward a goal.

To the exultation of hundreds of Cardinal fans, the '67 cagers slammed across hardwood courts and skidded to a halt with a 20-2 record—the greatest in school history. In tournament action Worthington swung past three teams before being stopped by Linden McKinley, the eventual state champs. District Runners-up, the Cards also earned the ninth slot in the AP state ranking.

Behind all the glory lay the dynamic coaching of new mentor, George Klein, a former basketball captain. His two captains, John Savage and Bob Hill won warm words from their coach, their teammates, and their audiences. Savage and senior guard Mike McClaskey were tapped all-state honorable mention at the end of the season.

Trackmen Muster Up Top Relays And Crack Seven Records

VARSITY TRACK—Front Row: (left to right) B. Ingram, D. Rieke (Capt.), E. Heise, S. Romohr, J. Titus (Capt.) R. Beetham, R. Lowery, M. Elliott, D. Atha. Row 2: J. Gibson, S. Kight, D. Atha, S. Although the track season was, in the opinion of Coach Eisenhart, not an exceptional one, the varsity won nine of fourteen contests and broke seven records in the process. At the OSU Relays, the two mile relay crew of Ralph Lowery, Steve Romohr, John Titus, and Jim Wilson put down a new time.

Although the squad placed eleventh at the Bellaire Relays, a distance medley relay team of Romohr, Wilson, Lowery, and Titus zoomed in on second place, breaking the school record. The four mile relay squad of Lowery, Wilson, and Co-Captains Titus and Dave Rieke came home from the Lancaster Relays (where the team placed fifth) with a first place and a new state record. Some other school records that were broken:

—High-point man Titus ran the mile in 4:32.7.

—Randy Chadwell, Warren Taylor, Steve Kight, and Ken Pruden dropped the school's eight mile relay time.

—Rieke, Larry Ray, Heise, and Titus spruced up for the sprint medley relay and brought that time down to 3:43.7.

—Finally, Rieke, Ray, Steve Bennett, and Lowery posted a new time of 2:44.1 for the medley relay event.

First place in the district mile went to Titus, as Rieke picked up third in the district half-mile. Rieke survived the regional and went on to the state meet (he did not place).

Reserves lost their four meets against varsity teams, and the freshman squad earned a 4-4 seasonal record.

District champ John Titus takes the final lap of the one mile event.

Racketeers Draft UA Tennis Star, But Cannot Checkmate Golden Bears

With several top-ranked teams among its opposition, Worthington's tennis team pulled off a 10-4 seasonal record. It took the best three teams in the district—Bexley, Columbus Academy, and Upper Arlington—to hand the Cardinals those four losses. Later, in a heartening comeback, the Worthington squad dished out a 3-2 revenge defeat for Academy.

In the district, where Worthington placed sixth, Tom Almy and Captain Fritz Purtz stormed through to the doubles semi-finals, where Arlington's state doubles champs felled them 6-3 and 6-2. To try for Worthington Cup honors, the Cards entered Dave McCollister in singles competition and Almy and Purtz in the doubles. This time the pair (Almy and Purtz) went to the doubles finals, only to be stopped again by the Arlington state champs.

Mr. Craig Mielke, who was a key player for both the Upper Arlington and the OSU tennis teams, brought his considerable ability to coach the Cardinal players. Prospects ran high for the new coach, as the reserve tennis squad volleyed and served a 9-0 season.

Competition Within Team Drives Golfers To First Place Honors In District Play

Applauded throughout the area, Cardinal golfers bore down hard on their opponents, snapping up the district championship after a 17-2 season. Competition among eight seniors and one junior kept each player at his finest, so that the team was able to shove forward its toughest core of golfers at each match. Senior Tim Reardon topped the team as medalist fourteen of the nineteen matches he golfed.

When the squad carried off the district championship, the Cardinals ran up some impressive scores. A birdie on the eighteenth hole gave Scott Beaver a phenomenal par 70 and pushed the team's total one point past Arlington's. Behind him, Reardon's 74, Lindsey Thomas' 75, and Mike Schurtz's 78 drove the quartet into the championship slot. Disqualification at the state tournament was the end of the Cardinals' hopes for taking home the state golf trophy.

More great teams seemed likely when the reserves knocked down all six of their foes. The freshmen, however, won once, tied once, and lost three times.

Mike Schurtz peeks after the ball.

Clinic And Last-Minute Victories Into A Winning Season

April and May crowds drew up at the baseball diamond to count up an 18-6 record for the 1967 varsity team. Because seven of those wins stemmed from ninth inning reversals, most of those crowds saw some good action. Watterson smothered any of WHS's district hopes when its team pulled an eighth inning victory in its first district game.

Cincinnati was the host city for a baseball clinic in May which brought Ohio high school teams together with the Cincinnati Reds. Worthington's squad listened as Red players cast out baseball hints, and then the Cardinal batmen sat in the bleachers for a Reds' game.

Several stand-outs helped bring on the Cards' fine season. Pitcher John Savage hurled nine wins and two losses, managing 105 strike-outs and two shut-outs. Shortstop and catcher Greg Nesser batted a .340 average, knocking out six doubles, two triples, and two home runs. In response, Ohio named Nesser to its all-state high school team. When his team came up to bat, third baseman Bob Hill clubbed one double, three triples, and three home runs for a .321 average, while senior Jim Fleeman, who covered second base when in the field, came up with a .325 batting average.

Season's end found the reserves at 11-3 and the freshmen at 3-4.

Heads search the sky for Greg Nesser's pop fly.

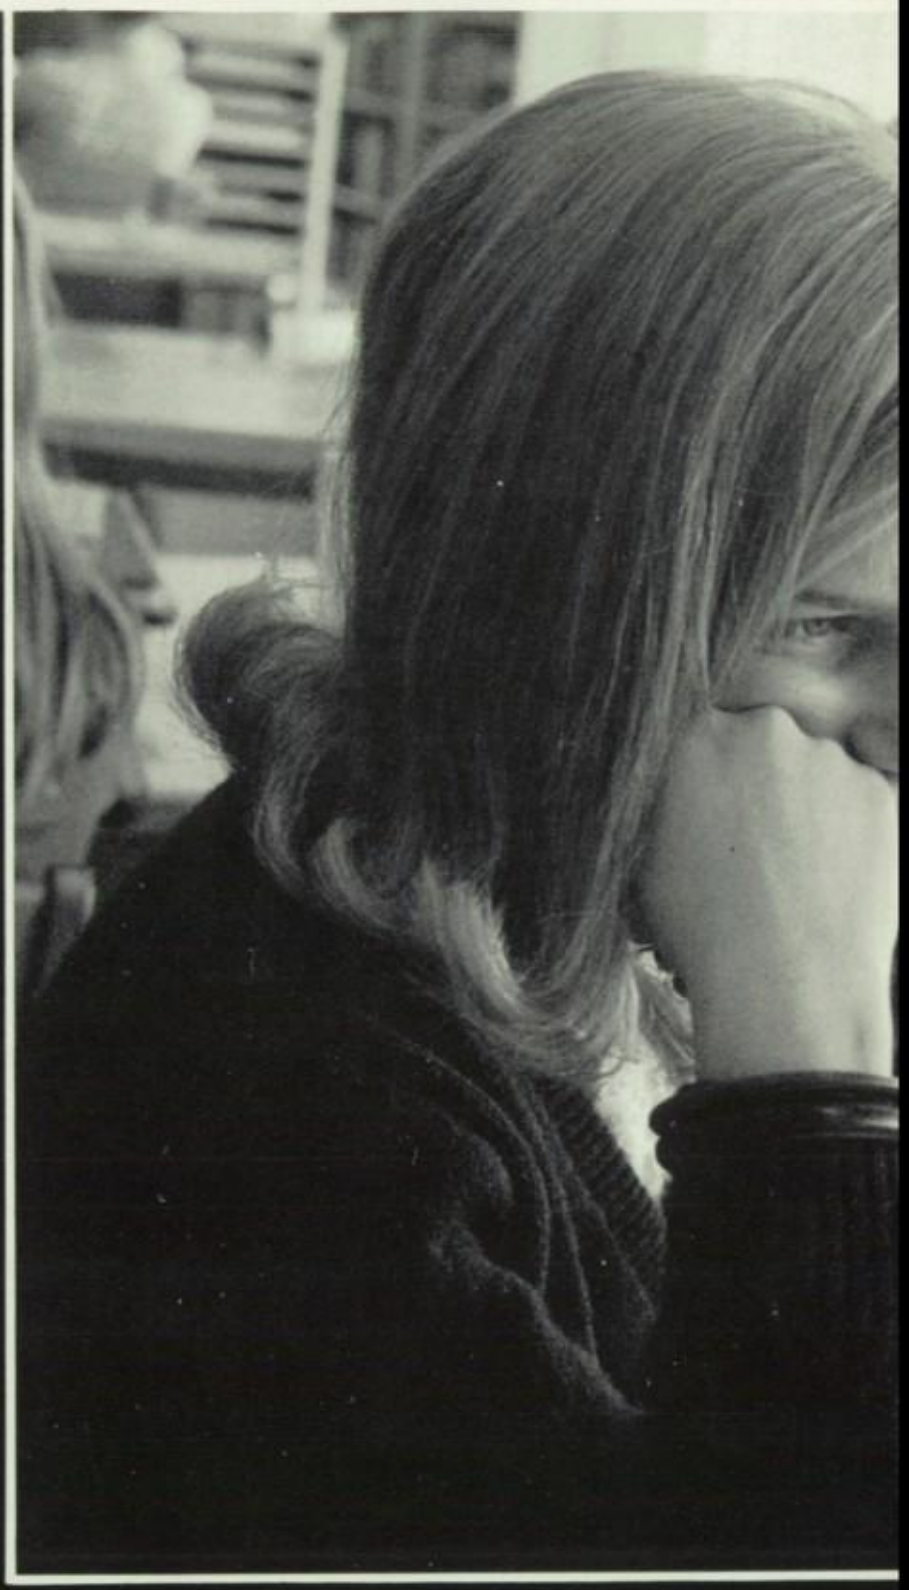
Girls Battle And Yell In Intra- And Interscholastic Sports

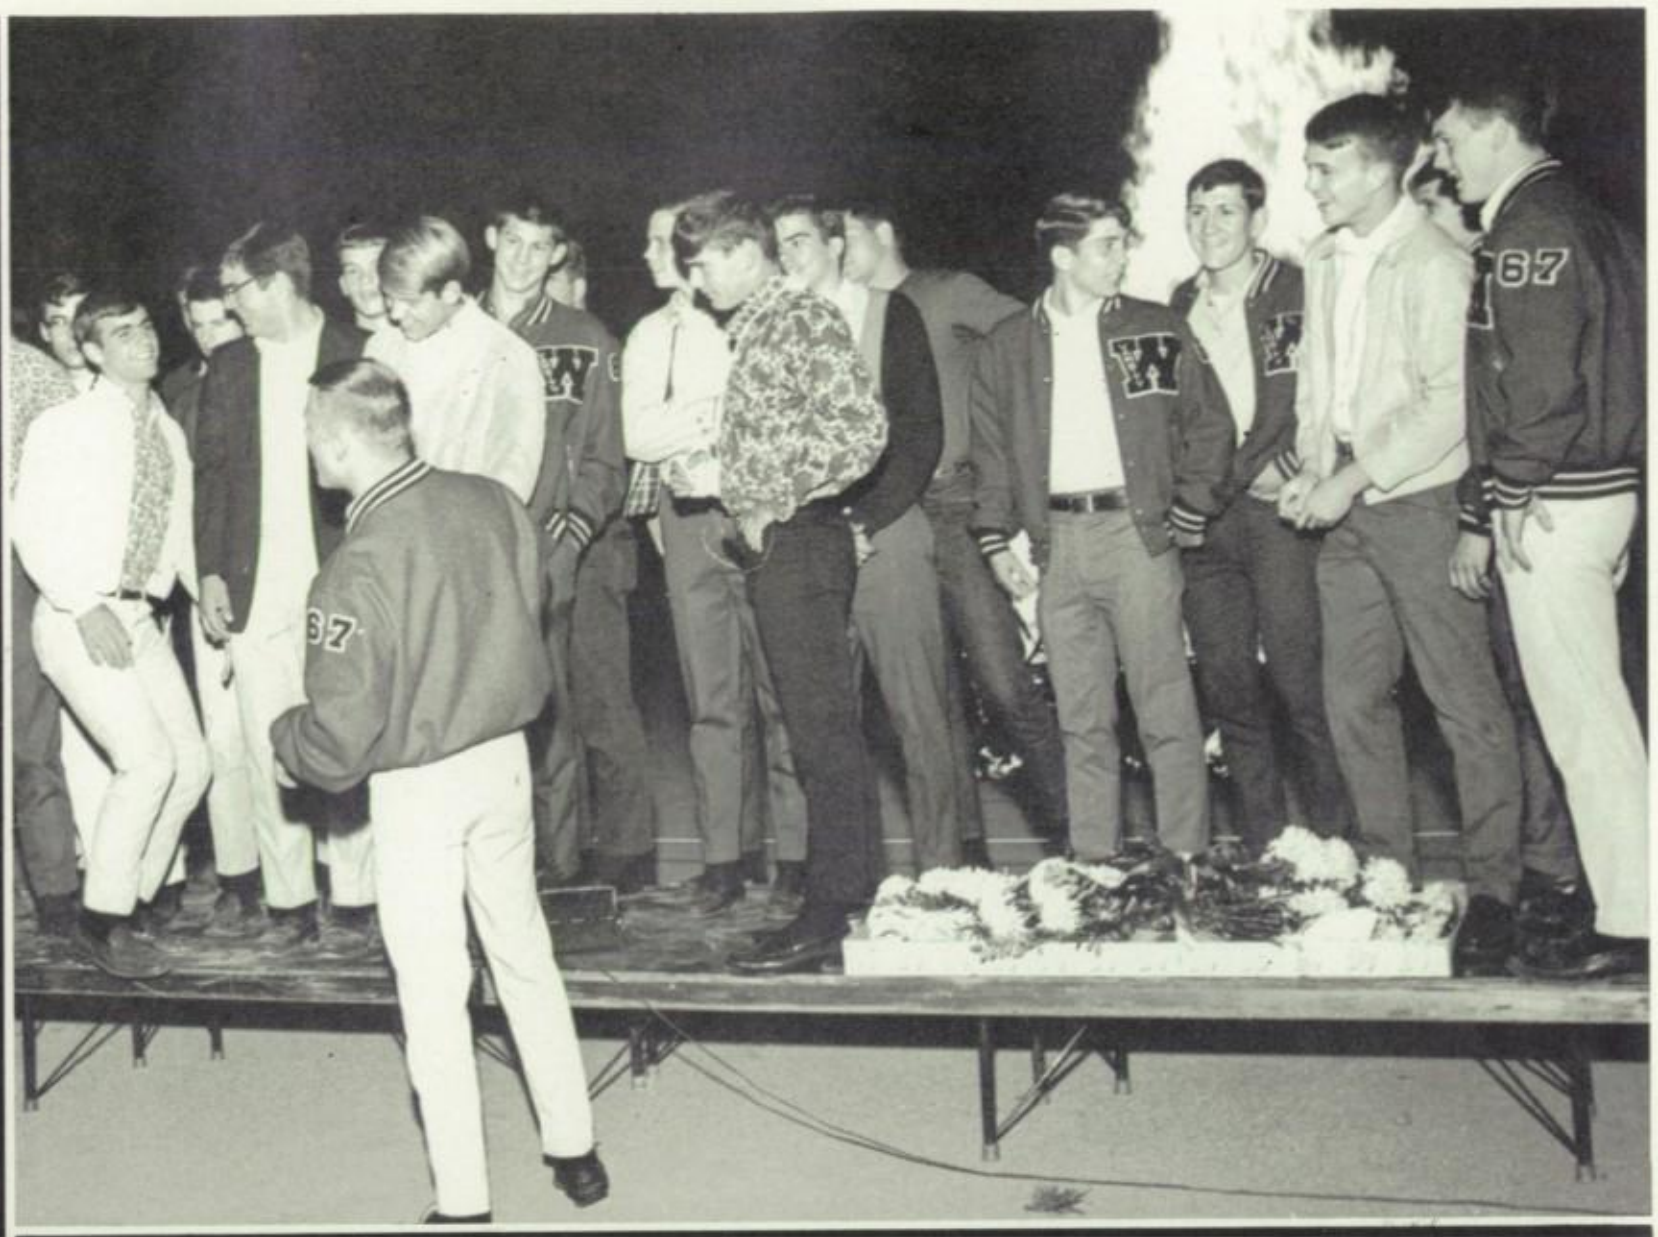
Entering the locker room at any time during the year, girls were confronted with mammoth lists upon which they could register for intramurals. Girls dropped in after school, squeezed into jeans, and threw themselves into various sports, ranging from softball to bowling. Keen competition was set between teams, whose members mixed fun and skill, earning GAA points as well.

To shape up hockey, basketball, and volleyball teams for inter-school contests, Miss Bach and Mrs. Howell chose players from a gymnasium full of candidates. Depending upon their showing in practices, basketball and hockey members were sorted into A and B teams. Volleyball worked differently: from a field of eight class teams, four groups were primed for intramural play.

Hockey players raced back and forth on the school's front green to accumulate a 9-1 record, while the A and B basketball teams shot for eight wins and two losses. Finishing off the intermural year, volleyball players served up a 6-4 overall tally.

After the ball escapes from Debbie Carter (left), Hartley players pounce on it in an intermural game.





Students

Whether a student is representing Worthington High School on an athletic team or catching up on back history assignments, his life is dynamic. His classes demand that he at times be a musician, a painter, a scholar, an actor, and a debater. After school he gives his allegiance to clubs, to the school and to the community.

With friends he laughs and complains about his work; with his teachers he questions, challenges, argues. Always there is something to do—scenery to construct for a play, a swim meet or baseball game to attend, or a research project or theme to complete. With vigor and vitality the student lives each day to the fullest.

Gathered around a WHS landmark are class officers: Hobby Harbrecht (Pres.), Sally Meyer (Sec.), Bob Hill (V.P.), Beth Arter (Treas.).

In Memoriam

Math teacher + Y-Teens adviser + friend = Mary Elizabeth Patton. The sum of her importance, however, was greater than that equation, for her high principles and ideals were felt inside and outside the classroom, inside and outside Worthington.

Miss Patton divided her attention among her friends, her profession, and her church. Her support and work with the Worthington Education Association earned her the respect of Worthington's faculty, just as her thoughtfulness won her the devotion of her friends, and her knowledge, the regard of her students.

The Last Word...

One could never produce a yearbook single-handedly. The business staff spends hours upon hours promoting advertising and selling books. The editorial staff sacrifices even more hours in snapping pictures, laying-out pages, writing copy, and indexing the book.

But the work of publishing a yearbook goes far beyond the small band of people who make up the staff. There are those countless people who donate so little of their time that it is hardly noticeable, yet is very much appreciated. I wish to take this opportunity to thank my staunch staff; those who helped identify pictures and offered information or advice; Mr. Paul Retrum of Artmaster, who volunteered counsel and anecdotes before each deadline; Mr. Kenneth Heaps, who contributed invaluable photographic knowledge and equipment; Miss Elaine Hottenroth, our morale and money manager; and our patrons and advertisers.

Because of the efforts of innumerable persons, the 1967 Cardinal yearbook was finally put to press. I sincerely hope that the time and energy that was spent creating this book will prove to be proportional to your enjoyment of the many memories that it recalls.
